PREFACE.

THOUGH this text-book is small, it comprises, I believe, everything necessary—so far as grammar is concerned—for a student of modern Irish. I have not treated at all of the ancient forms of the language; and I have excluded everything in the shape of dissertation: the grammar of the modern Irish language, and no more, is here set forth in words as few and simple as possible.

I have not suggested any changes either in spelling or in grammatical forms, or attempted innovation of any kind: this is a grammar of the language as it actually exists in the works of our best writers.

All the illustrative examples are quotations from standard Irish writings; but though I retain the references, I have not given them in the grammar, as they would encumber the book, and impede, rather than facilitate the learner. I may mention here, however, that the works from which the examples are chiefly taken, are, those of Keating, the publications of the Ossianic Society, "The Three Sorrowful Stories of Erin" (viz., "The Fate of the Children of Usna," "The Fate of the Children of Lir," and "The Fate of the Children of Turenn"), and occasionally the "Annals of the Four Masters." The language of the various works published by the Archæological and Celtic Societies is generally too antiquated to be quoted in a grammar of modern Irish.

I have all through given word-for-word translations of the examples; free translations would have been more pleasant to read, but would have added considerably to the learner's difficulty.

In the last Part—"Idioms"—I have given a popular rather than a scientific explanation of the principal idioms of the language. Nothing like this is to be found in any other Irish Grammar; and I believe that the learner who masters it will be saved much labour and perplexity.

There are several other Irish Grammars, but none low enough in price to be within reach of the many. Whoever wishes to study the Irish language in its ancient as well as in its modern forms, must procure O'Donovan's Grammar; without this great work no one can attain a thorough knowledge of the language. I may also mention "The College Irish Grammar," by the Rev. Ulick J. Canon Bourke, in which there is a great amount of miscellaneous information on the language, proverbs, and popular literature of Ireland.

The labours of the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language have lately given a great impetus to Celtic studies. The Society has produced two admirable little elementary books (the First and Second Irish Books) and are about to bring out a third, all drawn up by the members themselves on the plan of the elementary works of Smith, Arnold, Ahn, &c. But the want of a very cheap and simple text-book on Irish Grammar has been much felt; and this Grammar has been written to supply the want. I have written it with the cognisance of the Council of the Society, of which I am myself a member. It was at first intended that the name of the Society should appear on the title-page along with my own name, and a resolution to that effect was passed by the Council. But I found some difficulty as to the exact words, and I have accordingly contented myself with mentioning the matter here.

I acknowledge with thanks that I have received valuable assistance from several gentlemen of the Society, who read every word of my proofs, suggesting various corrections, alterations, and improvements. One member in particular, Mr. John Fleming of Rathgormuck, in the county Waterford, read all my manuscript in the first instance, and all the proof-sheets afterwards. Mr. Fleming's assistance was invaluable to me, for he possesses an intimate knowledge of modern Irish Grammar, language, and literature, and what is still better, much sound sense and clear critical judgment.

SCHOOL IRISH GRAMMAR.

PART I.

ORTHOGRAPHY.

CHAPTER I.

SOUNDS.

I. LETTERS.

1. The Irish alphabet consists of eighteen letters, of which thirteen are consonants and five are vowels.

2. The five vowels are a, e, í, o, u; of which a, o, u are broad, and e, í are slender.

3. Each consonant (with the exceptions mentioned below) has a broad and a slender sound. When a consonant comes immediately after or before a broad vowel, it has its broad sound: when it comes after or before a slender vowel, it has its slender sound. But this does not apply to b, p, h, m, p, each of which has one sound only, whether joined with a broad vowel or a slender vowel.

4. Vowels are either long or short. A long vowel is usually marked by an accent; as bán, white: a short vowel has no mark; as mac, a son.

5. The Irish vowels, like the English, have an obscure sound in unaccented syllables, of which it is not necessary to take further notice here.

6. The following are the usual sounds of the Irish letters, so far as they can be represented by English letters.

7. Those marked with asterisks are only imperfectly represented in sound by the corresponding English letters: those not so marked are represented perfectly or very nearly so.

8. The sounds of the marked letters must be learned by ear: it is hardly possible to give in writing such a description of them as would enable a learner to utter them.

9. C is equal to k, yet when it comes before the diphthong ao or the triphthong aoi, beginners find it very hard to sound it: caol (narrow) is neither kail or quail, but something between: caom (gentle) is neither keen or queen, but something between.

10. So also with g, which (broad and slender) is equal to g in got and get: yet gaol is hard for a beginner to utter, being neither gail nor quail, but something between.

11. The Irish broad d and t bear the same relation to each other as the English d and t: that is, the first in each case is flat or soft, and the second sharp or hard. English d and t are sounded by placing the tip of the tongue against the roof of the mouth: Irish d and t by placing the top of the tongue against the upper front teeth. Irish d and t may be described in another way: the two sounds of th in those and thumb are both continuous, the first flat, the second sharp. Now the two explosive sounds corresponding to these two continuous sounds (i.e., with the tongue in the same position), are exactly the Irish d and t.

12. Broad l and n are sounded by placing the top of the tongue (not against the roof of the mouth as in case of English l and n but) against the upper front teeth. Irish d and t are to English d and t as Irish l or n to English l or n.

13. Slender p is the most difficult of all the Irish consonantal sounds: and learners, unless they have acquired it in youth, often fail to articulate it correctly, though the teacher may sound it over and over again for their imitation.

14. As h represents a mere breathing or aspiration and not an articulate sound, and as it never begins a word, some writers exclude it from the letters, thus making seventeen instead of eighteen, as given here.

15. The following are the native names of the Irish letters, but they need not be used by the learner. All or most of them are the names of trees. áilm, a; beic, b; coll, c; dan, d; eada, e; fearn, f; gorr, g; uaic, h; ioica, i; luir, l; mun, m; num, n; oir or onn, o; peic-bog, p; ruir, r; ruil, s; teime, t; úr, u.

II. DIPHTHONGS.

1. There are thirteen diphthongs in the Irish language—viz., æ, ao, eu, ia, ua, ai, ea, ei, eo, io, iu, oi, ui; of which the first five are always long, and the remaining eight are sometimes long and sometimes short.

2. The following are the sounds of the five long diphthongs :—

3. æ sounds like ay in slay; as pæ, the moon, pronounced ray.

4. ao, in the southern half of Ireland, sounds nearly like way, and in the west and north-west somewhat like we. Thus maop, a steward, is pronounced like mwair in the south, and like mweer in the west and north-west.

5. eu like ai in lair; as in pæup, grass, pronounced fair.

6. ia like ee in beer; as in ciap, dark-coloured, pronounced keer.

7. ua nearly like oe in doer; as in luan, Monday, pronounced loo-an.

8. The following are the sounds of the eight diphthongs that are sometimes long and sometimes short. When these diphthongs are long there is an accent over one of the vowels: when short there is no accent.

9. ái long has an accent over the a, and sounds something like the awi in drawing; as in eáin, tribute, pronounced caw-in.

aí short is sounded something like the a in valiant or the o in collier; as in maic̄, good, whose sound is very nearly represented by moh.

In Ulster, aí short is pronounced like short o in bell: as in aipioe, restitution, which is pronounced oshoe in the north, and ashoe in the south and west.

10. éa long has an accent over the e, and sounds like ea in bear; thus méap, a finger, is pronounced mare.

ea short sounds like ea in heart (but shorter); as in peap, knowledge, pronounced fass.

11. éi long has an accent over the e, and sounds like ei in rein; as pém, a course, pronounced rain.

eí short, like e in sell; as in ceip, a basket, sounded like kesh.

12. eó long has an accent over the o, and is sounded nearly like long English o with a slight sound of y before it; as in ceól, music, which will be correctly pronounced if a k sound is put before the word yole.

eo short, nearly like u in shut, with y before it; as in veoc, drink.

Note.—This diphthong is short in only a very few words.

13. ío long has an accent over the i, and sounds very like ea in hear; as in píon, wine, pronounced feen or fee-on.

io short, nearly like short i; as in miopp, myrrh, which has nearly the same sound as the first syllable of mirror.

14. iú long has an accent over the u, and has the same sound as the diphthongal English u in tune; as in píú, worthy, which is sounded exactly like few.

iu short is sounded like the u in put, with a y before it; as in pluuc, wet.

15. ói long has an accent over the o, and is sounded like the owi in owing; as in póil, a while, pronounced fā-il.

oi short like the o in love, with a very short i at the end; as in τοil, the will.

16. úi long, with an accent over the u, is sounded like ooi in cooing; as púil, the eye, pronounced soo-il.

uī long, with an accent over the i, has nearly the same sound as we; as in buisé, yellow, which is pronounced bwee.

ui short is like the ui in quill; as in puiréog, a lark, pronounced fwishoge.

III. TRIPHTHONGS.

1. There are commonly reckoned five triphthongs, which are always long:—aoi, coi, loi, ioi, uai.

2. Coi is sounded very like we, as in maom, wealth, pronounced mween.

3. Eoi is sounded like the yoi in the combination yō-ing; as in peoib, flesh, which will be correctly pronounced if the sound of f is put before the combination yō-il.

4. Loi is sounded like eei in seeing; as laoig, a physician.

5. Ioi like the ewi in mewing; as cuim, gentle.

6. Uai like ooi in cooing; as buaib, strike, which is sounded boo-il.

7. The preceding attempts to represent the sounds of the diphthongs and triphthongs are in many cases mere approximations. The student must hear them pronounced, and in no other way is it possible to learn to sound them correctly.

IV. VARIOUS SOUNDS.

1. Cl and ol before m, nn, ll, or ng, in monosyllables, and often before nc and nc, are sounded in Munster like the ou in foul; as cam, crooked, and coll, hazel, pronounced cowm and cowl; and gleannán, a small glen, pronounced glounthann: and o before ð and g has often the same sound; as foġlam, learning, pronounced foġlim.

2. Cl and cl are often sounded like long English i in fine; as paðarc, sight, pronounced ry-ark; laðap, a fork, pronounced lyre; maðm, a breach, pronounced mime.

3. The termination aö is pronounced in Connaught nearly the same as oo: thus bualaö, striking, is pronounced booloo in Connaught, but boola in Munster.

4. In the combination ðl, the ð is silent, and the whole is sounded like l or ll; as coðlaö, sleep, pronounced culla.

5. In the combination ln, the n is silent, and the whole is sounded like l or ll; as colna, of a body, pronounced culla.

6. In the combination ðn, the ð is silent, and the whole is sounded the same as n or nn; as céaðna, the same, pronounced kaina.

7. Final e is never entirely silent in Irish as it is in English; thus míne, smoothness, is pronounced meena. In some situations it is very nearly silent in the modern language; as in croíðe, a heart, pronounced eree.

8. There are some Irish consonants which, when they come together in a word, do not coalesce in sound, so that when they are uttered, a very short obscure vowel sound is heard between them.

This generally occurs in the case of two liquids, or a liquid and a mute. Thus lopɣ, a track, is pronounced so as to seem, to an ear accustomed to English, a word of two syllables; not lurg but lurrug. Oealö, a shape, is sounded, not dalv, but dallav; ɣeapö, bitter, is sounded sharrav; bopb, proud, is pronounced burrub; colɣ, a sword, cullug, and so on. In Irish prosody, however, such words as these count as only one syllable.

In the English language no such difficulty exists in regard to most of these letters; they coalesce perfectly in sound, so that each of the above words would be a pure monosyllable.

CHAPTER II.

LETTER CHANGES.

I. ASPIRATION.

1. The term "aspiration" is used to express a certain change of sound suffered by some of the Irish consonants under certain grammatical conditions.

2. It is impossible to give a definition of aspiration that will correctly describe all the cases, inasmuch as the changes of sound vary in kind with the several consonants. In most cases the change caused by aspiration is one from an explosive to a continuous sound.

3. There are nine consonants which can be aspirated, namely, b, c, d, f, g, m, p, r, t; these are called mutable or aspirable consonants; the others are called immutable. The aspiration is denoted either by placing a point over the consonant, as ċ; or by placing h after it, as ch.

4. The following are the sounds of the aspirated consonants so far as they can be represented by English letters.

5. bh or ḃ is sounded sometimes like v and sometimes like w, and it often has a sound something between both; as a bean, his wife, pronounced a van; gabal, a fork, pronounced gowal.

6. Ch broad has a guttural sound which is not represented in English; but it is heard in the pronunciation of the word lough, Irish lȯc, a lake.

Ch slender (i.e. joined with a slender vowel) has a less guttural sound than ċ broad; as miċiall, folly, in which the ċ sound is only a little more guttural than h in mee-heel.

7. Oh and ġ have the same sound. When slender, they are sounded like initial y in English; as a ġean, his love, pronounced a yan. Oh and ġ broad have a guttural sound which cannot be represented by English letters, though it is something like initial y or initial w; it stands to the guttural sound of broad ċ in the relation of flat to hard. Both these aspirated letters are silent at the end of a word; as ḡiað, a deer, pronounced fee-a.

But in south Munster the final ġ is fully sounded, like g in fig: as Copcaġ (dative of Copcaċ, Cork), pronounced curkig in Munster, but curkce elsewhere.

8. Ph is always silent; thus a ḡior, his knowledge, is pronounced a iss; an ḡeaðóġ, the plover, pronounced an addoge.

9. Mh is very nearly the same as b, viz., like v or w; as a m̄isap, his dish, pronounced a vee-as.

10. Ph has the sound of f, as a ḡian, his pain, pronounced a fee-an.

11. Sh and ċ are the same as h; as a ḡál, his heel, pronounced a haul; a ċobap, his well, pronounced a hubber.

II. RULES FOR ASPIRATION.*

1. The possessive pronouns mo, my; do, thy; and a, his, aspirate the first consonant of the next word: as mo b̄ó, my cow; do ċeann, thy head; a ḡorċ, his garden.

2. The article aspirates in the singular feminine nominative and accusative;† as an bean, the woman. (See also p. 18, Par. 6, and p. 31.)

3. The article aspirates in the genitive singular masculine; as an ḡuirċ, of the garden.

* These rules cannot be fully understood without a knowledge of Etymology. It must be borne in mind that they apply only to the aspirable or mutable consonants.

† Irish nouns have no inflection for the accusative (or objective) case; but it is often convenient to speak of nouns in the accusative, by which is meant the case where the noun is the object of a transitive verb, or sometimes of a preposition.

NOTE.—This rule and the preceding do not apply to the letter ḡ. (See also p. 18, Par. 6, and p. 31.)

4. In compound words, the initial consonant of the second word of the compound is aspirated (with a few exceptions): thus from ceann, a head, and bḡat, a garment, is formed ceannbḡat, head-garment or canopy. (See also p. 34, Par. 2.)

5. The interjections a and O, as signs of the vocative case, aspirate; as a ḡḡ, O man.

6. An adjective agreeing with a noun has its initial consonant aspirated when the noun is nominative singular feminine, or genitive singular masculine, or vocative singular of both genders; and, according to O'Donovan, in the nominative plural masculine, when the noun ends in a consonant; as bó bḡn, a white cow; cait bḡn, of a white cat; a ḡḡ mḡḡ, O great man; a bean ḡeḡn, O mild woman; capall bḡna, white horses. (ḡ and ḡ are sometimes excepted: see p. 34.)

7. The initial consonant of a verb is aspirated (1) in the infinitive mood by the particles ḡo and a; as ḡo ḡéanaḡ or a ḡéanaḡ, to do: (2), in the simple past tense, active voice; as ḡo ḡear ḡé, he stood: (3) by the particles ní, not, and má, if: as ní beḡḡ ḡí, she will not be; má ḡearann ḡé, if he stands; (4), by the relative a, who, (expressed or understood); as an ḡé a buailear the person who strikes. (See also pp. 58 and 60.)

8. The simple prepositions, with some exceptions, aspirate the initial consonants of nouns: as aḡḡ bḡḡḡ, on top; ḡo inuliacḡ, to a summit; ḡaḡḡ ḡean, under affection.

III. ECLIPSIS.

1. A consonant is said to be eclipsed, or to suffer eclipse, when its sound is suppressed, and the sound of another consonant which is prefixed to it, substituted: thus in n-ḡán, ḡ is eclipsed by n, Univ Calif - Digitized by Microsoft®

and the whole word is pronounced nawn, whereas ḍán is pronounced dawn. It is only at the beginning of words that consonants are eclipsed.

2. The following eight consonants can be eclipsed:—b, c, ḍ, f, g, p, r, s; the others cannot. Between the eclipsing and the eclipsed letter there is usually placed a hyphen, as m-bárḍ; but often they are put together without any separating mark, as bporc. Sometimes eclipsis is denoted by the doubling of the eclipsed letter; thus a τταρḍ is the same as a ḍ-ταρḍ, their bull.

3. Each consonant has an eclipsing letter of its own.

4. ḍ is eclipsed by m; as a m-bárḍ, their bard, pronounced a mawrd.

5. C is eclipsed by g: as a g-coll, their hazel, pronounced a gowl or a gull.

6. Ḍ by n; as a n-ḍor, their bush, pronounced a nuss.

7. F by v (which itself sounds like v or w); as a v-feapann, their land, pronounced a varran.

8. G is eclipsed by n. But this is not a true eclipsis, for the resulting sound is not that of n, but the sound of English ng; thus a nḡiolla, their servant, is pronounced ang-illa.

9. P is eclipsed by b; as a b-pian, their pain, pronounced a bee-an.

10. S is eclipsed by t, as in an t-rúil, the eye, pronounced an too-il.

11. T is eclipsed by ḍ; as a ḍ-tál, their adze, pronounced a dawt.

IV. RULES FOR ECLIPSIS.*

1. The possessive pronouns plural—ár, our.

* These rules apply of course only to those consonants that can be eclipsed. The rules for eclipsis, like those for aspiration, suppose a knowledge of Etymology.

ðup, your; a, their; eclipse the initial consonant of the next word; as áp ð-tiḡearna, our Lord; ðup ḡ-cpánn, your tree; a b-páipe, their field.*

2. The article eclipses the initial consonant of nouns in the genitive plural; as teaç na m-bápb, the house of the bards; ḡopɛ na ḡ-capall, the field of the horses.

3. When a simple preposition is followed by the article and a noun in the singular number, the initial consonant of the noun is generally eclipsed; as aip an m-bópb, on the table; ó'n ð-páipe, from the sea. (See p. 31; see also Syntax.)

4. The initial consonant of a verb is eclipsed after the interrogative particles a, an, cá, naç; also after ḡo, that; muna, unless; iap, after; ðá, if; and after the relative a preceded by a preposition; as a m-beipeann pe? Does he bear? an m-buail-eann tú? Dost thou strike? cá ð-puil rí? Where is she? naç ð-tuigeann tu? Dost thou not understand? ḡo m-beannaige ðia ðuit, may God bless thee; muna ð-tuitpup, unless thou shalt fall; ðá n-ðeappánn, if I would say; an típ ann a ð-táinic riáð, the country into which they came.

5. When a noun beginning with p is preceded by the article, the p is eclipsed when the noun is nominative feminine, or genitive masculine, and generally in the dative of both genders, as an ɛ-paoippe (fem.), the freedom; ḡopɛ an ɛ-paḡaipɛ, the field of the priest; aip an ɛ-paoḡal, or ap an paoḡal, in the world. But if the p is followed by b, c, ð, ḡ, m, p, or ɛ, it is not eclipsed; as ḡleann an pmoil, the valley of the thrush; loç an pçáil, the lake of the champion. (See pp. 30 and 31.)

* Rules 1, 2, 3, 4, do not apply to p. See for this letter Rule 5.

6. The following rule is usually given with the rules for eclipsis :—

When a word begins with a vowel, the letter n is generally prefixed in all cases where an initial consonant (except p) would be eclipsed ; as a n-apán, their bread ; loç na n-éan, the lake of the birds.*

v. Caol le caol aḡup leaḡan le leaḡan, OR SLENDER WITH SLENDER AND BROAD WITH BROAD.†

1. If a consonant or any combination of consonants comes between two vowels, they must be either both slender or both broad ; thus in polap, light, the o and the a are both broad vowels ; and in ṡinnear, sickness, the ɪ and the e are both slender vowels. But such combinations as polɪp and ṡinnap are not allowable, because the o and the ɪ in the first case, and the ɪ and the a in the second case, are one of them broad and the other slender.

2. In compliance with this rule, when two words, or a word and a syllable, are joined together, so that in the resulting word a consonant or consonantal combination would fall between two vowels, one of them broad and the other slender, then either the broad vowel must be made slender or the slender one broad, to bring them to an agreement.

3. Sometimes the broad vowel is changed to make it agree with the slender vowel ; sometimes the slender vowel is made broad to agree with the broad vowel ; sometimes it is the vowel before the consonant that is changed ; sometimes the change is made in the vowel after the consonant. A prefix is generally changed to suit the word it is joined to, not the reverse ; thus when cóm is prefixed to ṡearaṡ, standing, the word is cómṡearaṡ, competition, not cómṡaraṡ.

* For a very detailed and clear statement of the laws of aspiration and eclipsis, see the Second Irish Book by the Society for the preservation of the Irish Language.

† This rule is very generally, but not universally, followed in the Irish language.

4. Changing a broad vowel to a slender is called in Irish caoluḡaḍ (i.e., making slender, from caol, slender), and in English attenuation; changing from slender to broad is called in Irish leaḍnuḡaḍ (i.e., making broad, from leaḍan, broad).

5. Attenuation takes place chiefly in two ways:—first by putting a slender vowel between the broad vowel and the consonant, as when ball, a spot, is changed to baill, spots; or when ḡá is postfixed to buail, and the resulting word is buailḡeá, not buailḡá: secondly, by removing the broad vowel which precedes or follows the consonant, and putting a slender vowel in its place; as when ceann, a head, is changed to cinn, of a head.

6. In like manner “making broad” takes place chiefly in two ways, which are the reverse of the two preceding.

7. The following examples will illustrate the preceding rules and remarks:—

8. When the future termination ḡaḍ is added to buail, the resulting word is not buailḡaḍ, but buailḡeáḍ, I shall strike.

9. When the infinitive termination aḍ is added to buail, the resulting word is not buailaḍ but buailaḍ.

10. When móḡ, great, is prefixed to cion, love, the compound is not móḡcion but móḡc-ion, great love.

11. When ceann, head, is prefixed to litr, a letter, the compound is not ceannlitr but cinnlitr, a head-letter or capital letter. (This is a case of irregular attenuation.)

12. When the diminutive termination óḡ is added to cuil, the resulting word is not cuilóḡ but cuilleóḡ, a fly.

13. When e is added to oḡóḡ, a thumb, to inflect it for the genitive, the word is not oḡóḡe but oḡóḡe, of a thumb.

14. When the diminutive termination ín is added to capall, a horse, the whole word is not capallín but capallín.

VI. SYNCOPE.

1. Syncope, or the omission of one or more letters from the body of a word, is very common in Irish.

2. When a short vowel occurs between a liquid (l, n, p, or r) and a mute, or between two liquids, the word is often syncopated when it is lengthened either by grammatical inflection or otherwise.

3. The syncope generally consists in the omission of the short vowel; but this change often involves others in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c.; and is often also accompanied by some slight consonantal changes.

4. The following examples exhibit the chief types of syncope.

5. Lánaima, a married couple; plural lánaíma, contracted from lánaímana.

6. Lapaip, a flame; plural lappaíca, contracted from lappaíca.

7. Focal, a word; foclóip, a dictionary, contracted from focalóip.

8. Saibip, rich; comparative paibpe, contracted from paibipe.

9. Cačair, a city; genitive cačpač, contracted from cačarač.

10. Flaičeamail, princely; comparative flaičeamla, contracted from flaičeamala.

11. Colann, the body, genitive colna, (sometimes colla), contracted from colanna.

12. Capa, genitive capað: the plural is formed by adding e to this, which syncopates the second a: this would make capðe, which again, in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c., is made caipðe.

13. Uapat, noble, becomes uaiple in the comparative, by a process exactly similar to the last.

14. Follup, evident, becomes poillpe in the comparative in a similar way.

15. Abann, a river: the plural is formed by adding e; this causes syncope of the second a and the omission of one n, which would make the plural aðne; and this again becomes aibne, by the rule caol le caol &c.

16. Labair, speak (imperative mood); labpam, I speak, contracted from labapam,

PART II.

ETYMOLOGY.

1. There are nine parts of speech in Irish, which are the same as those in English.

CHAPTER I.

THE ARTICLE.

I. CHANGE OF FORM IN THE ARTICLE.

1. The Irish language has one article, an, which has the same meaning as the English definite article the.

2. The article changes its form according to number, gender, and case.

3. In the singular number the article has the form an in all the cases except the genitive feminine, in which it becomes na; as caisleán na cipe, the castle of the hen.

In the plural number the article is always na.

4. In the spoken language the n of an is often omitted before a consonant; as ceann a cairb, the head of the bull. And this is sometimes found in books also, both printed and MS., but it is not to be recommended.

5. When an follows a preposition ending in a vowel, the a is often omitted in writing, but the omission is usually marked by an apostrophe; thus, ó an tír, from the land, is written ó'n tír; and pá an ngréim, under the sun, is written pá'n ngréim.

Very often in MSS., and sometimes in printed books, the apostrophe in such cases is omitted, and the n of the article joined with the preposition; as ón τήν, πάν η̄γρέμ.

6. In the plural the article (νά) is often joined to the preposition; as δονα, for δο να.

7. The letter ρ is inserted between certain prepositions and the article αν; and this occasionally leads to combinations that might puzzle a learner. Thus ανν αν λεᾱβαν, in the book, is written ανρη αν λεᾱβαν, and ρη αν λεᾱβαν, which is still further shortened to ραν λεᾱβαν: also (omitting the n) ανρηα λεᾱβαν, and even ρα λεᾱβαν. And in the plural, ρη να κορρᾱβ, "in the bodies."

II. CHANGES PRODUCED BY THE ARTICLE.

1. The article produces certain changes in the initial letters of nouns to which it is prefixed.

2. These changes are very important, and the learner will obtain a clearer view of them by separating the singular from the plural. For more on this subject, see page 31.

SINGULAR.

1. If the noun begins with an aspirable consonant (except ρ, τ, υ), the article aspirates in the nominative feminine, and in the genitive masculine; as αν βό, the cow; ευαν αν ρ̄ιρ μ̄όρ, the harbour of the great man.

2. If the noun begins with ρ, followed by a vowel or by λ, η, or ρ, the ρ is eclipsed by τ in those cases where, according to the last rule, a mutable consonant would be aspirated; as αν τ-ράλ (fem.), the heel; αν τ-ρρ̄όν (fem.), the nose; ευᾱc αν τ-ρριαν (masc.), the price of the bridle.

3. If the noun begins with a vowel, the article prefixes τ to the nominative masculine, and η to the genitive feminine; as αν τ-ᾱταρ, the father; λεᾱβαν να η-υῑορε, the book of the dun (cow).

4. If the noun begins with an eclipsable consonant (except υ or τ), the article generally eclipses, if it be preceded by a simple preposition; as αν an ḡ-cpann, on the tree; ḡ'n b-ḡocal iber, "from the word 'iber;'" leip an b-ḡeap, with the man.

5. But after the prepositions do and de, the article aspirates oftener than it eclipses; as ceitpe céimo do'n ériop, four degrees of the zone (Keating); do leanadap a ḡ-copa do'n éappaiz, their feet clung to the rock (story of the Children of Lir).

6. No change is produced by the article in the singular number, if the noun begins with l, n, p, d, t, or with r before a mute.

PLURAL.

1. If the noun begins with an eclipsable consonant, the article eclipses in the genitive; as mup na b-ḡíodbaö, [the] island of the woods; caulín deap epúidte na m-bó, [the] pretty girl of [the] milking of the cows (i.e., the pretty milking girl).

2. If the noun begins with a vowel, the article prefixes n to the genitive, and h to the other cases; as típ na n-óḡ, the land of the young (people); ó na h-áitib rín, from those places.

These are the only changes produced by the article in the plural.

CHAPTER II.

THE NOUN.

I. GENDER.

1. There are only two genders in the Irish language, the masculine and feminine: all Irish nouns, therefore, are either masculine or feminine gender.

2. In ancient Irish there was a neuter gender, but no trace of it remains in the modern language.

3. To know and remember the gender of all ordinary Irish nouns is one of the great difficulties in learning the language, as it is in learning French and many other languages. Without this knowledge, which can only be mastered by practice, no one can speak or write Irish correctly.

4. There are a few general rules which will very much help the learner to distinguish the gender of nouns: they are only general rules, however, subject to many exceptions; and where they do not apply, the student must depend on practice and memory.

MASCULINE.

1. The following nouns are generally masculine:—

(1.) Names of males; as coileac, a cock; laoc a hero; peap, a man.

(2.) Nouns of more than one syllable, ending in a consonant, or two consonants, preceded by a broad vowel; as boiṫceall, churlishness: except (a), derivatives in aṫṫ; (b), diminutives in óḡ.

(3.) Nouns ending in óir, aip, aṫ, aíḃe (or oíḃe, or uíḃe), when they denote personal agents, as they generally do; as pealabóir, a mower; pealḡaip, a hunter; ceiṫcapnaṫ, a soldier—one of a body of kerns; ḡéalaíḃe or ḡéuluíḃe, a story-teller.

(4.) Diminutives in án and abstracts in ap; as coileán, a whelp; cáipḃeap, friendship.

(5.) Diminutives in ín are of the same gender as the nouns from which they are derived.

FEMININE.

2. The following nouns are generally feminine:—

(1.) Names of females; names of countries, rivers, and diseases; as ceap, a hen; Eip, Ireland; ḃeapḃa, the Barrow; pláíḡ, a plague.

(2.) Diminutives in óḡ, and derivatives in aṫṫ as puiréóḡ, a lark; cuiḡpaṫṫ, fragrance: and abstract nouns formed from the genitive feminine of adjectives; as ḃaille, blindness.

(3). Nouns ending in a consonant, or in two consonants, preceded by a slender vowel (except those in óir); as púil, the eye; pógluim, learning

II. DECLENSIONS.

CASES.

1. Irish nouns have four cases, that is, four different inflections, to express relation:—Nominative, genitive, dative, and vocative.

2. The nominative case is the same as the nominative in English.

3. The genitive is the same as what is called the possessive case in English.

4. The dative is the case where a noun is governed by a preposition.

5. The vocative case is the same as what is called the nominative of address in English.

6. Irish nouns have different forms for these four cases, and for no others. Thus, the four cases of bradáin, a salmon, are for the plural number, as follows:—Nom. bradáin, as trí bradáin, three salmon; gen. bradáin, as leò na m-bradáin, the lake of the salmon; dat. bradáinaib, as do na bradáinaib, to the salmon; voc. bradáina, as a bradáina, ca b-puil sib aó dul? "O ye salmon, whither are ye going?"

7. These four cases are not always different in form; thus the four cases of the same noun in the singular number are:—Nom. bradáin; gen. bradáin; dat. bradáin; voc. bradáin; in which it will be seen that the dative is the same as the nominative, and the vocative the same as the genitive.

8. Those cases which are alike in form are distinguished by the sense; just as the nominative and objective cases are distinguished in English.

9. Some writers on Irish grammar have put in two more cases, in imitation of Latin declension; the accusative (or, as it is called in English, the objective) and the ablative. But in Irish there are no separate inflections for them, the accusative being always the same in form as the nominative.

and the ablative the same as the dative ; so that it would be only a useless puzzle to the learner to include them in a statement of Irish declension. In certain explanations, however, and in the statement of certain rules, it is sometimes convenient to speak of the accusative case.

10. Different nouns have different inflections for the same case ; thus the datives singular of cop, a foot, and boip, a bush, are different, namely, coip and boip. But though this variation extends to most of the cases, the genitive singular is taken as the standard, in comparing the declension of one noun with the declension of another.

11. There are five chief ways of forming the genitive singular of Irish nouns ; and in one or another of these ways, far the greatest number of nouns in the language form their genitive. There are usually reckoned, therefore, FIVE DECLENSIONS of Irish nouns.

12. Besides these there are other genitive inflections, but as no one of them comprises any considerable number of nouns, it is not considered necessary to lay down more than five declensions. The number of declensions is, however, very much a matter of convenience ; and, accordingly, in some Irish grammars, there are more than five, and in some less.

FIRST DECLENSION.

1. The first declension comprises masculine nouns which have their characteristic vowel, that is, the last vowel of the nominative singular, broad.

2. The genitive singular is formed by attenuating the broad vowel.

3. In the singular, the dative is like the nominative, and the vocative is like the genitive ; in the plural, the nominative is generally like the genitive singular, and the genitive like the nominative singular. Example, ball, a member or limb.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom.* ball.	Nom. baill.
Gen. baill.	Gen. ball.
Dat. ball.	Dat. ballaḅ.
Voc. a baill.	Voc. a balla.

4. The number of nouns that belong to this declension is very large; but though they all form their genitive singular in the same way (except those in ac, in which there is a slight additional change, for which see next paragraph), there are a few which vary in the formation of other cases.

5. Nouns in ac, in addition to the attenuation, change ċ into ġ in the genitive singular; and generally form the nominative plural by adding e to the genitive singular; and from this again is formed the dative plural in iḅ, in accordance with the rule in Par. 9, page 23. Example, mapcaċ, a horseman.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. mapcaċ.	Nom. mapcaġe.
Gen. mapcaġ.	Gen. mapcaċ.
Dat. mapcaċ.	Dat. mapcaġiḅ.
Voc. a mapcaġ.	Voc. a mapcaċa.

6. A few nouns make their nominative plural by an increase in a; as peann, a pen; plur. peanna: and some of these are syncopated, as uḅall, an apple; plur. uḅla.

7. In a few nouns of this declension the nominative plural is formed by adding ta or ċa to the nominative singular; as peól, a sail; nom. plur. peóлта; dat. plur. peóлтаiḅ: múr, a wall; nom. plur. múrċa; dat. plur. múrċaiḅ.

8. In many words of one syllable belonging to this declension, the attenuation in the genitive singular causes considerable change in the vowel or diphthongal part of the word; thus, corp, a body; gen. cupp: iaḡ, a fish; gen. éiḡ:

*It would be well for the learner, when declining nouns, to call this "nominative and accusative" all through the declensions.

nearc, strength; gen. nearc or nirc: peap, a man; gen. pip: cpann, a tree; gen. cpomn: béal, a mouth; gen. béil or beoil.

The three following rules (9, 10, and 11) apply to all the declensions.

9. The dative plural ends in iö.

This iö corresponds with the Latin dative and ablative termination ibus or bus. It is now very seldom pronounced, but it is nearly always retained in writing; just as in English, gh, which was formerly sounded as a guttural in such words as plough, daughter, is retained in writing, though it is no longer pronounced.

10. The dative plural is formed from the nominative plural whenever this latter differs from the genitive singular: otherwise from the nominative singular.

11. The vocative is always preceded by the particle a or O, which aspirates the initial; as a píp, O man; a mná, O women; O éígeapna, O Lord.

SECOND DECLENSION.

1. The second declension comprises most of the feminine nouns in the language.

2. The genitive singular is formed by adding e to the nominative. If the characteristic vowel is broad, it must be attenuated in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c.

3. The dative singular is formed from the genitive singular by dropping the final e.

4. When the characteristic vowel is broad, the nominative plural is formed from the nominative singular by adding a; when the characteristic vowel is slender, by adding e.

5. The genitive plural is generally like the nominative singular.

6. The vocative is usually the same as the nominative, and is accordingly omitted from the paradigm.

First example, peampóġ, a shamrock.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. peampóġ .	Nom. peampóġa .
Gen. peampóġo .	Gen. peampóġ .
Dat. peampóġ .	Dat. peampóġaib .

Second example, péirt, a worm, a beast.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. péirt .	Nom. péirte .
Gen. péirte .	Gen. péirt .
Dat. péirt .	Dat. péirtib .

7. Nouns in aé, when they belong to this declension, change the é to ġ in the genitive singular: thus, cláirpeaé, a harp, is declined as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. cláirpeaé .	Nom. cláirpeaá .
Gen. cláirriġe .	Gen. cláirpeaé .
Dat. cláirriġ .	Dat. cláirpeaáaib .

8. There are many nouns belonging to this declension which depart from the general rule laid down in Par. 4, in forming their nominative plural.

9. Some, probably over fifty, form the nominative plural by adding anna; and these form the genitive plural by dropping the final a of this termination; thus, cúip, a cause; nom. plural cúipeanna; gen. plural, cúipeann; dat. plural, cúipeannaib.

10. Some form their nominative plural by adding áá: thus, obair, a work, and opáid, a prayer, make oibpeáá and opáideáá in the nominative plural.

11. When the characteristic vowel is slender, it is often dropped in the genitive plural; as puam, a sound; gen. plural puam.

12. When the nominative plural takes te, the genitive plural is formed by adding aö; as coill, a wood; nom. plur. coillte; and genitive plural as seen in Oileán na g-coillteas, the island of the woods (Keating).

13. There are other variations of the nominative and genitive plural; but they do not comprise any considerable number of nouns, and they must be learned by practice.

THIRD DECLENSION.

1. Nouns belonging to the third declension are some of them masculine and some feminine.

2. The genitive singular is formed by adding a to the nominative singular.

3. The vocative is like the nominative.

4. The nominative plural is generally formed by adding a or e.

5. The genitive plural is generally like the nominative singular. Example, cleap, a trick or feat.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. cleap .	Nom. cleapa .
Gen. cleapa .	Gen. cleap .
Dat. cleap .	Dat. cleapaib .

6. If the characteristic vowel is slender, it must be made broad in the genitive singular, in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c.; as toil, the will, gen. toila.

7. Sometimes τ or τ̄ is introduced before the a of the genitive singular, which commonly causes other changes by syncope; as cobail, sleep; gen. cobailta: buaioirt, trouble, gen. buaioeap̄ta.

8. This is the case with verbal or participial nouns in as, ead, and uḡas, the genitives of which have the same form as their passive participles considered as verbs; and they are all commonly reckoned as belonging to this declension, though the genitive singular is formed in some by adding e, not a; as molað, praising; gen, molta: říneað stretching; gen. řín̄te: caoluđað, making slender; gen. caoluiđ̄te.

9. Nouns in açt generally, and those in eap or ior, often, belong to this declension; as clipteaçt, dexterity; gen. clipteaçta: ðoilđior, sorrow; gen. ðoilđiora. But the greater number of those in eap or ior belong to the first declension; thus the last noun, ðoilđior, is often made ðoilđir in the genitive; and þronntanar, a gift, makes þronntanar.

10. There are forty or fifty nouns (many of them ending in ir), which form their genitive singular in aç, and which are reckoned as belonging to this declension, though some writers arrange them under a separate declension; as caçar, a city; gen. caçrac: Teañar, Tara, gen. Teañrac: đrám, hatred; gen. đránaç.

11. Those in ir generally form their genitive as above; but açar, a father; máçar, a mother; and þráçar, a brother, form their genitive by dropping the final i:—gen. açar, máçar, þráçar.

12. Outside the general rule stated in Par. 4 above, there is considerable variety in the formation of the nominative plural.

13. Those in oir generally make the nominative plural by adding iðe; as řpealaðoir, a mower, nom. plur. řpealaðoiriðe.

14. And these form the genitive plural variously; generally na řpealaðoirið, but sometimes na řpealaðoir or na řpealaðoraç.

15. Others form the nominative plural either like the genitive singular or by adding nna to it; as řpuç, a stream; gen. řpoça; nom. pl. řpoça or řpoçanna: ðruim, a back; gen. ðroma; nom. plur. ðroma or ðromanna.

16. Those that add nnα, form the genitive plural by omitting the α; as ρρυτ̃; gen. plur. ρρυτ̃ανν.

17. Many nouns of this declension that end in n or l, form their plural by adding τε or τα; as μόιν, a bog; gen. sing. μόνα; nom. plur. μόιντε.

18. And these generally form their genitive plural by adding αῶ to the nominative plural; as μόιν; gen. plur. μόιντεαῶ.

19. Those that form their genitive singular in αῶ (10) form the plural by adding α to this αῶ: as λαραῖρ, a flame; gen. sing. λαρραῶ; nom. plur. λαρραῶα.

FOURTH DECLENSION.

1. Nouns of the fourth declension end in vowels or in ίν, and are some of them masculine and some feminine.

2. There is no inflection in the singular, all the cases being alike.

3. The nominative plural is generally formed by adding ιῶε or αῶα (with occasionally an obvious vowel change). Example, άιρνε, a sloe.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. άιρνε .	Nom. άιρνωιῶε .
Gen. άιρνε .	Gen. άιρνεαῶ .
Dat. άιρνε .	Dat. άιρνωιῶῖ .

4. Some form the plural by adding τε or εῖ: as τεῖννε, a fire; nom. plur. τεῖνντε: δαοι, a clown; nom. plur. δαοιῖτε; and αιῖνε, a commandment, has nom. plur. αιῖεαντα.

5. These generally form the genitive plural, by adding ῶ or αῶ (not to the nominative singular, as in the model, but) to the nominative plural: as nom. plur. δαοιῖτε, clowns; gen. plur. δαοιῖτεαῶ.

6. Nouns ending in αιῖε, υῖῶε, and αιπε, generally belong to this declension; as ρῆλαβυῖῶε, a slave; πίοβαῖπε, a piper.

FIFTH DECLENSION.

1. Nouns of the fifth declension are mostly feminine.

2. They generally end in a vowel; and they form their genitive by adding n or nn, and occasionally o or u.

3. The dative singular is formed from the genitive by attenuation.

4. The nominative plural is formed from the genitive singular by adding a.

5. The genitive plural is like the genitive singular.

Example, uppa, a door jamb.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. uppa .	Nom. uppana .
Gen. uppan .	Gen. uppan .
Dat. uppan .	Dat. uppanaib .

6. To this declension belong the proper names Eipe, Ireland; gen. Eipeann, dat. Eipinn: Alba, Scotland; gen., Alban, dat. Alban: Muma, Munster; gen. Muinan, dat. Muinain; and several others of less note.

7. Capa, a friend, is an example of the genitive in o: nom. capa; gen. capaob; dat. capaib; nom. plur. capde.

8. There is a good deal of variety in the formation of the cases of nouns belonging to this declension, which can only be learned by practice.*

IRREGULAR DECLENSION.

1. Some nouns are irregular; that is, they are not inflected in accordance with any of the regular declensions.

2. The most important of the irregular nouns are: *—bean, a woman; bó, a cow; brú, a womb;

* For additional examples of declensions of nouns, both regular and irregular, see Appendix at the end of the book.

caopa, a sheep; ceó, a fog; cnó, a hut; cú, a hound; Dia, God; lá, a day; mí, a month; o or ua, a grandson. They are declined as follows. (The vocative is not given where it is like the nominative.)

bean, a woman, fem.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. bean.	Nom. mná.
Gen. mná.	Gen. ban.
Dat. mnaoi.	Dat. mnáib.

Gen. Dé.	Gen. Dia, Déiteaö.
Dat. Dia.	Dat. Déib Déiteib.
Voc. a Dhé or a Dhia.	Voc. a Dhée, Dhéite.

Lá, a day, masc.

Nom. lá.	Nom. laete.
Gen. lae.	Gen. laeteaö, lá.
Dat. lá, ló.	Dat. laeib.

Mí, a month, fem. †

Nom. mí.	Nom. míora.
Gen. mír, míora.	Gen. míor.
Dat. mí, mír.	Dat. míoraib.

O or ua, a grandson, masc.

Nom. ó, ua.	Nom. uf.
Gen. í, uf.	Gen. ua.
Dat. o, ua.	Dat. íb, uib.
Voc. a, uf.	Voc. a, uf.

DECLENSION OF THE ARTICLE WITH THE NOUN.

1. The initial changes produced by the article in the nouns to which it is prefixed have been set forth at page 17; these changes must be carefully observed in declining nouns with the article.

2. Twelve typical examples are here given, corresponding with the several cases mentioned in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, pages 17, 18; and these examples include almost every possible variety. There is a good deal of difference of usage in the dative singular of nouns beginning with p.

3. The declension of the singular number only is given; the changes in the plural are so very simple (see page 18) that they can present no difficulty.

4. Colg, a sword, masc. Nom. an colg; gen. an cúilg; dat. leip an g-colg (Par. 4, p. 17), or do'n colg (Par. 5, p. 18).

5. Cailleac, a hag, fem. Nom. an cailleac; na caillice; dat. ó'n g-caillic or do'n caillic.

6. Saozal, the world, masc. Nom. an raozal; gen. an τ-raozal; dat. ó'n raozal or do'n τ-raozal (Par. 5, p. 18).

7. Sabóid, the Sabbath, fem. Nom. an τ-Sabóid; gen. na Sabóide; dat. ó'n Sabóid or do'n τ-Sabóid (Pars. 2 and 5, pp. 17 and 18.)

8. Slac, a rod, fem. Nom. an τ-plac; gen. na plaice; dat. leip an plac or do'n τ-plac.

9. Spól, satin, masc. Nom. an rpol; gen. an τ-rpol; dat. ó'n rpol or do'n τ-rpol.

10. Apal, an ass, masc. Nom. an τ-apal; gen. an apail; dat. ó'n apal.

11. Inip, an island, fem. Nom. an inip; gen. na h-inpe; dat. do'n inip.

12. Leac, a stone, fem. Nom. an leac; gen. na leice; dat. do'n leic (Par. 6, p. 18).

13. Óile, a deluge, fem. Nom. an óile; gen. na óileann; dat. do'n óilinn.

14. Sgeul, a story, masc. Nom. an rgeul; gen. an rgeíl; dat. ó'n rgeul.

15. Speal, a scythe, fem. Nom. an rpeal; gen. na rpeile; dat. leip an rpeil.

CHAPTER III.

THE ADJECTIVE.

I. DECLENSION OF ADJECTIVES.

1. In Irish the adjective changes its form according to the gender, case, and number of the noun.

2. Adjectives are declined in much the same manner as nouns; but they never take the inflection ib in the dative plural (though anciently they had this inflection like nouns): the dative plural of an adjective is like the nominative plural.

3. There are usually reckoned four declensions of adjectives.

4. The inflections of these four declensions follow those of the noun so closely, that when the noun is mastered the adjective presents no difficulty.

FIRST DECLENSION.

1. Adjectives of the first declension are those that end in a consonant preceded by a broad vowel, as bán, white; pluic, wet.

2. In the masculine gender (i.e., when the adjective belongs to a masculine noun), they are declined the same as nouns of the first declension of the type of ball, except that the nominative plural always ends in a.

3. In the feminine gender adjectives are declined the same as nouns of the second declension of the type of peampóg.

4. Both genders are alike in the plural. Example, bán, white.

Singular.		Plural.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc. and Fem.
Nom.	bán. bán.	Nom. bána.
Gen.	bám. bámc.	Gen. bán.
Dat.	bán. bán.	Dat. bána.
Voc.	bám. bán.	Voc. bána.

SECOND DECLENSION.

1. Adjectives of the second declension are those that end in a consonant preceded by a slender vowel.

2. In the singular, all the cases of both masculine and feminine are alike, except the genitive feminine, which takes e.

3. In the plural, both genders are alike, and all the cases except the genitive are formed by adding e; the genitive is like the nominative singular. Example, mfn, smooth, fine.

Singular.		Plural.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc. and Fem.
Nom.	mfn. mfn.	Nom. mfné.
Gen.	mfn. mfné.	Gen. mfn.
Dat.	mfn. mfn.	Dat. mfné.
Voc.	mfn. mfn.	Voc. mfné.

THIRD DECLENSION.

1. Adjectives of the third declension are those that end in aínal, which has the same signification as the English postfix like:—bean, a woman banainal, womanlike, modest.

2. The two genders are always alike.

3. The four cases singular are alike except the genitive, which is formed by adding a, with a syncope.

4. In the plural, the genitive is the same as the nominative singular; and the other cases are the same as the genitive singular. Example, maipainal, graceful.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. maípeamál.	Nom. maípeamla.
Gen. maípeamla.	Gen. maípeamál.
Dat. maípeamál.	Dat. maípeamla.

FOURTH DECLENSION.

1. Adjectives of the fourth declension are those that end in vowels; as móρῶα, majestic.

2. They have no inflections, being alike in all cases, numbers, and genders.

II. DECIENSION OF THE ADJECTIVE AND ARTICLE WITH THE NOUN.

1. The rules for the aspiration of the initial consonants of adjectives agreeing with nouns are given at p. 10; and these rules must be very carefully observed in declining nouns with adjectives.

2. It may be added here that ϑ and τ sometimes resist aspiration, especially if they follow a noun ending in n. There is much variety of usage as to aspiration of adjectives in the dative singular.

3. When a noun is declined with both an adjective and the article, the initial of the adjective is generally eclipsed in the genitive plural (or takes n if it be a vowel).

4. Four typical examples are here given of the declension of the adjective with the noun. For the influence of the article see p. 17.

An capall bán, the white horse, masc.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. an capall bán.	na capaill bána.
Gen. an écapaill bán.	na ḡ-capall m-bán.
Dat. ó'n ḡ-capall bán or m-bán.	ó'na capallaib bána.
Voc. a écapaill bán.	a écapalla bána.

Ἄν ψυιρεόςγ βεαγ, the little lark, fem.

Nom. ἄν ψυιρεόςγ βεαγ.	να ψυιρεόγα βεαγα.
Gen. να ψυιρεόγιε βιγε.	να β-ψυιρεόςγ μ-βεαγ.
Dat. ό'ν β-ψυιρεοιγ βιγ.	ό'να ψυιρεόγαιβ βεαγα.
Voc. α ψυιρεόςγ βεαγ.	α ψυιρεόγα βεαγα.

Ἄν ενος άρβ, the high hill, masc.

Nom. ἄν ενος άρβ.	Nom. να ενυιc άρβα.
Gen. ἄν ενυιc άρβ.	Gen. να γ-ενος η-άρβ.
Dat. ο'η γ-ενος άρβ.	Dat. ό'να ενοcαιβ άρβα.
Voc. α ενυιc άρβ.	Voc. α ενοcα άρβα.

Ἄν βό θυβ, the black cow, fem.

Nom. ἄν βό θυβ.	Nom. να βά θυβα.
Gen. να βό θυβc.	Gen. να μ-βό η-θυβ.
Dat. δο'η μ-θυβη θυβ.	Dat. δο να βύαιβ θυβα.
Voc. α βό θυβ.	Voc. α βα θυβα.

III. COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

1. Irish adjectives have three degrees of comparison, the same as English adjectives.

2. The positive is the simple form of the adjective; as άρβ, high; πραιτεαμαι, princely.

3. The comparative and the superlative have the same form, which is that of the genitive singular feminine; as άρβε, πραιτεαμια; and they are distinguished by prefixed particles, or by the context.

4. The comparative has generally the particle νίση (or νίσηα or νίση) prefixed, and it is usually followed by νά, than (spelled also ινά and ιονά); as τά ἄν τεαc πο νίση άρβε νά ἄν τεαc ηη, this house is higher than that house : ἀτά ἀν λαοὺ ἴο πρίγκειπια νά ἀν πρίγκειπιν, "yonder champion is more princely than the king himself."

5. The superlative is often preceded by ἴπ or ἀπ, with the article expressed before the noun ; as ἀν πειπ ἴπ πριγκειπια παν τειπ, the most princely man in the country.

6. In the comparative, νίοπ is omitted when the assertion or question is made by the verb ἴπ in any of its forms, expressed or understood ; as βα ὄυιβε α ζπυαζ νά ἀν ζυαλ, "her hair was blacker than the coal;" ἴπ ζιλε πνεαέτα νά βαμνε, snow is whiter than milk ; ἀν πειάππ ὄο ὄεαπβρατέαπ νά ἔύρα ?
is thy brother better than thou ?

7. When the characteristic particles are not expressed, the construction generally determines whether the adjective is comparative or superlative ; as ἀν εαλαῶαν ἴπ υαπλε νά πιλῶεαέτ, the art which is nobler than poetry ; ἀν εαλαῶαν ἴπ υαπλε αἴπ βιέ, "the art which is the noblest in the world."

8. An adjective in the comparative or superlative is not inflected ; all the cases being alike in form.

IRREGULAR COMPARISON.

1. The following adjectives are irregularly compared. There are a few others, but their departure from rule is so slight as not to require notice.

2. ὤα is a comparative as it stands, signifying more (in number) ; but it has no positive, unless ἰομῶα or μῶπιν (many), or some such word, be considered as such.

Positive.	Comparative.	Superlative.
beaḡ, little.	n̄sor luḡa.	ı̄r luḡa.
paḡa, long.	n̄sor paide, n̄sor ı̄ıa.	ı̄r paide, ı̄r ı̄ıa.
fuḡur or uḡur, easy.	n̄sor fuḡa, n̄sor uḡa.	ı̄r fuḡa, ı̄r uḡa.
maič, } deač, } good.	n̄sor feārr.	ı̄r feārr.
mimic, often.	n̄sor mionca.
mōr, great.	n̄sor mō.	ı̄r mō.
olc, bad.	n̄sor meapa.	ı̄r meapa.
ceič, hot.	n̄sor ceō.	ı̄r ceō.

3. There are certain particles which, when prefixed to adjectives, intensify their signification; and in accordance with the rule in Par. 4, page 10, they aspirate the initials of the adjectives.

4. The principal of these are an, ı̄sor, rō, rār, ūr: as maič, good; an-maič, very good: ḡrānna, ugly; ı̄sor-ḡrānna, excessively ugly: mōr, large; rō-mōr, very large: lāı̄ıur, strong; rār-lāı̄ıur, very strong, &c.

IV. NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

1. The following is a list of the most important of the numerals, both cardinal and ordinal.

For the influence of some of them in aspirating and eclipsing, and for other syntactical influences on the noun, see Syntax.

Cardinal.	Ordinal.
1. aon.	1st. óeāḡ.
2. ḡó, ḡá.	2nd. ḡapa.
3. tı̄ıı, ceōra.	3rd. tı̄ııeap.
4. ceāčı̄ıı, ceı̄ııe.	4th. ceāčı̄ıııāḡ.
5. cı̄ııḡ.	5th. cı̄ııḡeāḡ.
6. rē.	6th. rı̄ııeāḡ.

90.	{ noέα, noέαδ, δειέ ἀ'ρ ceitpe πίειδ	90th.	{ noέαδαδ, δεαέ- ήαδ αιρ ceit- pe πίειδ.
100.	céαδ.	100th.	céαδαδ.
1,000.	míle.	1,000th.	míleαδ.
2,000.	δά mífle.	2,000th.	δά mífleαδ.
1,000,000.	millún.	1,000,000th.	millúnαδ.

2. Ὁδ and ceatair are used only in the absence of nouns, i.e. merely as the names of the numbers; but δά and ceitpe are always used when the nouns are expressed; as δά έλουαρ, two ears; ceitpe πιρ, four men.

3. Πίε is declined :—Nom. πίε; gen. πίεαδ; dat. πίειδ; nom. plur. πίειδ.

4. Céαδ has gen. céιδ; nom. pl. céαδα or céαδτα.

5. The following nouns, which are all except beipt, formed from the numerals, are applied to persons only :—

díar, dír, two persons.	reáótar,	} seven persons.
beipt, a couple.	mór-íreiptar,
tríúr, three persons.	oótar,	eight „ ceáétar, four „	nonbar, naonbar,	nine „ cúigeap, five „	deicneábar,	ten „ íreiptar, six „

CHAPTER IV.

THE PRONOUN.

1. There are in Irish six kinds of pronouns :— Personal, Possessive, Relative, Demonstrative, Interrogative, and Indefinite.

I. PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

1. There are four personal pronouns—mé, I, tú, thou ; sé, he ; sí, she ; with their plurals, sinn, we ; sib, ye or you ; and siad, they. These are the simple forms of the personal pronouns.

2. Each of these takes an emphatic increase or postfixed syllable, equivalent to the English word self ; and the whole word thus formed is called the emphatic form. The emphatic syllables vary their vowel part in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c.

3. The following are the emphatic forms :—Míre or meirí, myself ; túra, thyself ; írean, himself; ripe, herself; rinne, ourselves; riðpe, yourselves; riaðpan, themselves.

4. The word féin, self, is often added to the personal pronouns, not as a particle but as a separate word; and it is still more emphatic than the particles mentioned in last paragraph:—mé féin, I myself; rí féin, she herself.

5. The personal pronouns are all declined; and they may carry the emphatic increase through all the cases.

6. The personal pronouns (except mé), unlike nouns, have a distinct form for the accusative (or objective) case. It is, of course, only the pronoun tú that is used in the vocative.

DECLENSION OF PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

The declension of the emphatic form of mé is given as an example: observe, in this, the vowel changes in obedience to caol le caol &c.

mé, I.

Singular.	Plural.
Nom. mé , I.	Nom. rinne , we.

Acc. í .	Acc. iáḃ .

PERSONAL PRONOUNS COMPOUNDED WITH PREPOSITIONS.

1. In Irish, the personal and the possessive pronouns unite with prepositions, each compound forming a single word.

2. In each case the preposition and the pronoun are amalgamated, and the latter changes its form, so as to be considerably, and in some cases completely, disguised.

3. These "prepositional pronouns," as they are sometimes called, are of constant occurrence in the language—scarce a sentence in which they are not met with: they are therefore of great importance, and the learner should get them all off by heart.

4. The following prepositions unite with personal pronouns:—aḡ; aṙ or aṙ; ann or i; aṙ; éum; de; ḃo; eibṙ or iḃṙ; ṙá or ṙaoi; le; o or ua; ṙoiú; ṙeaé; ṙaṙ; ṙṙé; uaṙ; um or im.

5. The following are the combinations of these prepositions with the personal pronouns.

6. The emphatic particles may be used with these combinations also, as well as with the uncompounded pronouns, of which one example is given.

Αἶ, at or with.

Singular.	Plural.
αἶμα, with or at me.	αἶμα, with us.
αἶμα, αἶμα, with thee.	αἶμα, with you.
αἶμα, with him.	αἶμα or αἶμα, with them.
αἶμα or αἶμα, with her.

The same with the emphatic increase.

αἶμα, with myself.	αἶμα, with ourselves.
αἶμα, with thyself.	αἶμα, with yourselves.
αἶμα, with himself.	αἶμα, with themselves.
αἶμα, with herself.

Ἄνω or ἄνω, upon.

ἄνω, on me.	ἄνω, on us.
ἄνω, on thee.	ἄνω, on you.
ἄνω, on him.	ἄνω, ἄνω, on them.
ἄνω, on her.

Ἄνω or ἄνω, in.

ἄνω, in me.	ἄνω, in us.
ἄνω, in thee.	ἄνω, in you.
ἄνω, in him.	ἄνω, in them.
ἄνω, in her.

Ἄνω, out of.

ἄνω, out of me.	ἄνω, out of us.
ἄνω, ἄνω, out of thee.	ἄνω, out of you.
ἄνω, out of him.	ἄνω, ἄνω, out of them.
ἄνω, ἄνω, out of her.

Ἄνω, towards, unto.

ἄνω, unto me.	ἄνω, unto us.
ἄνω, unto thee.	ἄνω, unto you.
ἄνω, unto him.	ἄνω, unto them.
ἄνω, unto her.

Ἄνω, from or off.

ἄνω, off or of me.	ἄνω, off us.
ἄνω, off thee.	ἄνω, off you.
ἄνω, off him.	ἄνω, off them.

Ὅο, to.

ὄαμ, ὄομ, ὄαή, to me.	ὄόμν, to us.
ὄοιτ, to thee.	ὄοιῶ, ὄσῶ, to you.
ὄο, to him.	ὄοῶ, to them.
ὄοι, to her.

Εἰδίη, between.

εἰδίηαμ, between me.	εἰδίηαμν, between us.
εἰδίηατ, between thee.	εἰδίηαῶ, between you.
εἰδίη εἰ, between him.	εἰδίηα, between them.
εἰδίη ἰ, between her.

Ῥά or Ῥαοι, under.

Ῥάμ, under me.	Ῥόμν, under us.
Ῥάτ, under thee.	Ῥοῶ, under you.
Ῥαοι, under him.	Ῥάα, under them.
Ῥάε, under her.

Ἔε, with.

Ἔομ, with me.	Ἔομν, with us.
Ἔοτ, with thee.	Ἔοῶ, with you.
Ἔοη, with him.	Ἔοῶ, with them.
Ἔοε, ἔοι, with her.

Ἔε is often written ηε in books, and its pronominal combinations in this form are often met with. They are as follows:—

Ἔομ, with me.	Ἔομν, with us.
Ἔοτ, with thee.	Ἔοῶ, with you.
Ἔοη, with him.	Ἔοῶ, with them.
Ἔοα, with her.

Ο or οα, from.

οαμ, from me.	οαμν, from us.
οατ, from thee.	οαῶ, from you.
οαῶ, from him.	οαα, from them.
οαε, οαί, from her.

Ῥόμῖαμ, before me.	Ῥόμῖαμν, before us.
Ῥόμῖατ, before thee.	Ῥόμῖαῶ, before you.
Ῥόμῖη, before him.	Ῥόμῖα, before them.
Ῥόμῖη, Ῥόμῖη, before her.

Σεα̇, beside.

σεα̇αμ, beside me.	σεα̇α̇α̇ι̇ν̇, beside us.
σεα̇α̇τ, beside thee.	σεα̇α̇ι̇β̇, beside you.
σεα̇ ε̇, beside him.	σεα̇α̇, beside them.
σεα̇ ι̇, beside her.

Ταρ, beyond, over.

το̇ρμ, τα̇ρμ, over me.	το̇ρρα̇ι̇ν̇, τα̇ρρα̇ι̇ν̇, over us.
το̇ρτ, τα̇ρτ, over thee.	το̇ρρα̇ι̇β̇, τα̇ρρα̇ι̇β̇, over you.
τα̇ι̇ρη̇ρ, over him.	τα̇ρρα̇τ̇α, τα̇ρρα̇, over them.
τα̇ι̇ρη̇τε, τα̇ι̇ρη̇ι, over her.

Τρη, through.

τρη̇ο̇μ, through me.	τρη̇ι̇ν̇, through us.
τρη̇ο̇τ, through thee.	τρη̇ι̇β̇, through you.
τρη̇ο̇, through him.	τρη̇ο̇τα̇, through them.
τρη̇ο̇τε, τρη̇ο̇τι, through her.

υα̇ι̇ρη̇τε, υα̇ι̇ρη̇τι, above her.

Um or ι̇μ, about.

υμ̇αμ, about me.	υμ̇α̇ι̇ν̇, about us.
υμ̇α̇τ, about thee.	υμ̇α̇ι̇β̇, about you.
υμ̇ε, about him.	υμ̇πα, about them.
υμ̇πε, υμ̇πι, about her.

II. POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

1. The possessive pronouns, which are merely the genitives of the personal pronouns, are as follows:—μο, my; το, thy; α, his or her; υ̇ρ, our; υ̇αρ or υ̇υρ, your; α, their. The three possessives, α, his, α, her, and α, their, are distinguished by the initial letter changes of the next word. (See pp. 9, 11, 12; and see also Syntax.)

2. The o of mo and do is omitted before a vowel or before þ; as m'ácar, my father; m'þeapann, my land. And do is often changed, before a vowel, to τ, ć, and h; as τ'ácar, ć'ácar, or h-ácar, thy father.

3. The possessive pronouns also take the emphatic increase, with this peculiarity, however, that the emphatic particle always follows the noun that comes after the possessive, or if the noun be qualified by one or more adjectives, the emphatic particle comes last of all; and in accordance with the rule caol le caol, its vowel is generally broad or slender according as the last vowel of the word it follows is broad or slender; as mo ćeać-pa, my house, or my own house; mo ćeać mór buiđe-ri, my great yellow house. And these again may be followed by þém (Par. 4, p. 40), rendering the expression still more emphatic; as mo ćeać-pa þém, my own house.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS COMPOUNDED WITH PREPOSITIONS.

1. The possessive pronouns are amalgamated with prepositions, much in the same way as the personal pronouns; as beip beannaćτ óm ćroiđe, bear a blessing from my heart.

2. The following are the most important of these combinations:—

Ann, in.

Singular.	Plural.
am, am', in my.	már, 'nár, in our.
ad, ad', in thy.	—
iona, ma, 'na, in his or her.	iona, ma, 'na, in their.

Do, to.

dom, dom', to my.	ðár, ð'ár, to our.
ðod, ðod', to thy.	—
ðá, ða, to his or her.	ðá, ð'a, to their.

le, with.

lem, lem', with my.	lep, le'p, with our leð, leð', with thy.	— lena, le n-a, with his or her.	lena, le n-a, with their,

O or ua from.

óm, óm', from my.	oár, ó'p, from our.
óð, óð', from thy.	—
óna, ó n-a, from his or her.	óna, o n-a, from their.

3. Those that are identical in form and different in meaning are distinguished by the initial letter changes they produce in the next word; as óna éiğ, from his house; óna tiğ, from her house; óna ð-tiğ, from their house:

4. These combinations can also take the emphatic increase, like those of the personal pronouns, with the peculiarity, however, noticed in Par. 3, p. 45; as óm éiğ móp árð-pa, from my great high house.

III. RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

1. There are three relative pronouns in Irish:—a, who, which, that; noç, who, which, that; naç, which not; as an té a buaileap, the person who strikes; an liaiğ noç a ðeip zo b-puil tú plán, the physician that says that you are well; an té naç b-puil láidip, ní पुलáip dó ðeic ðlic, “the person who is not strong, it is necessary for him to be wise.”

2. Óá sometimes takes the place of the relative a; and in some grammars it is counted as a distinct relative pronoun; as táid na gaolta ip feápp agum dá b-puil a ð-talam Epeann, “I have the best friends that are (to be found) in the land of Erin." And sometimes do stands for the relative a.

3. The relative a has sometimes the sense of "all which" or "all that;" as beip beannaçt cum a maiceann ðe ðiolpaic ðr̄a'p Eibip, "bear a blessing to all that live of the seed of Ir and Eber;" a ð-puil ran calaib ð'aicme Mháine, "all that are in the land of the tribe of Máine."

4. The relative pronouns are not declined.

IV. DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

1. The demonstrative pronouns are po, this, these; pin, that, those; þúb or úb, yonder: as an þeap po, this man; na mná pin, those women; þúb í þíol, "yonder she (moves) below."

V. INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

1. There are usually reckoned three interrogative pronouns:—cia or cé, who? cá, what? where? cað or cpeub, what? as cia çpuçuiç çú? who created thee? cað ðeip çú? what sayest thou? ca ð-puil an þeap pin? where is that man? cpeub ip éiçin? what is necessary?

VI. INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

1. The following are the principal indefinite pronouns:—

aon , one.	ceaçtar , either.
éiçin , some, certain.	uile , all.
eile , oile , other.	a çéile , each other.
cáç , all.	an çé , an çí , the person who.
çað , each, every.	cia b'é , cibé , çibé , whoever.
çað uile , every.

2. The indefinite pronouns are not declined ; except cáic, which has a genitive form, cáic ; and zac, which is sometimes made zacá in the genitive.

CHAPTER V.

THE VERB.

1. Irish verbs are inflected for number, person, mood, tense, and voice.

2. The conjugation is arranged, not according to the initial changes, but according to terminations.

3. As to the initial changes:—see pages 10 and 58 for the particles that aspirate, and page 12 for the particles that eclipse, the initials of verbs.

I. PERSONS : SYNTHETIC AND ANALYTIC FORMS.

1. The verb has three persons singular and three persons plural ; and it has inflections for the whole six in the indicative and conditional moods of the active voice, except in one tense of the indicative.

2. The six forms of the present tense, indicative mood, active voice, of the verb tóg, take, are as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
1. tógam , I take.	1. tógamais , we take.
2. tógaí , thou takest.	2. tógaí , ye take.
3. tógaí fé , he takes.	3. tógaí , they take.

3. This is what is called the synthetic form of the verb. The synthetic form is that in which the persons are expressed by inflections or terminations:

4. These six forms express the sense perfectly, without the accompaniment of the pronouns (except in the case of the third person singular): that is, $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\rho$, as it stands, without using along with it the pronoun $\tau\acute{\upsilon}$, thou, expresses perfectly "thou takest;" and so of the others.

5: But there is another way of expressing the persons, singular and plural, namely, by using one form of the verb for the whole six, and putting in the pronouns to distinguish the persons and numbers. This is what is called the analytic form of the verb.

6. In this analytic mode of expressing the persons and numbers, the form of the verb that is used is the same as the form for the third person singular; and the persons singular and plural are expressed as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
1. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\mu\acute{\epsilon}$, I take.	1. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\rho\iota\mu\eta$, we take.
2. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\tau\acute{\upsilon}$, thou takest.	2. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\rho\iota\beta$, ye take.
3. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\rho\acute{\epsilon}$, he takes.	3. $\tau\acute{o}\zeta\alpha\iota\delta$ $\rho\iota\alpha\delta$, they take.

7. The third singular of the verb is not a synthetic form like the other five, that is, it does not include the pronoun as they do. In the third person singular, therefore, the pronoun must be always expressed in order to distinguish the number and person; unless there is a noun, or that the nominative is in some other way obvious from the construction.

8. But generally speaking it is not allowable to express any other pronoun along with the corresponding synthetic form of the verb:—For example, it would be wrong to say déanam mé or déanamaid pinn, both expressions being tautological.

9. This rule, in the case of the third person plural, however, is sometimes not observed; for such expressions as molaid ríad and molfaid ríad—they praise, they will praise—are often met with, though molaid or molfaid alone would answer. And a like construction (in the third plural) is often used when the nominative is a plural noun, both in the present and in the past tense; as tríallaid mic Míleacá, “the sons of Milè go;” map do éoncadar na druidí, “when the druids saw.”

10. The emphatic particles may be postfixed to all the persons of verbs, in the same manner as to pronouns and nouns (p. 39); as molaim-pe, I praise; molair-pe, thou praisest. And in all such cases, the word féin (p. 40) may be used to make the expression still more emphatic; as do éuirpinn-pe féin mo leanb a cóolaó, “I myself would put my child to sleep.”

11. The general tendency of modern languages is to drop synthetic forms, and to become more analytic. The English language, for example, has lost nearly all its inflections, and supplied their place by prepositions, conjunctions, adverbs, and auxiliary verbs. Following this tendency, the synthetic forms of the Irish verb are falling into disuse in the spoken language; and it has been already remarked (p. 23) that the noun-inflection ib is now seldom used in speaking. But all these forms are quite common in even the most modern Irish books; and the learner must, therefore, make himself quite familiar with them.

II. TENSES.

1. In English a regular verb has only two different forms to express tense:—I love, I loved;
Univ Calif - Digitized by Microsoft®

all the other tenses are expressed by means of auxiliaries.

2. In Irish, a regular verb has five different forms in the indicative mood for tense. Reckoning those tenses only which are expressed by inflection, an Irish regular verb has therefore FIVE TENSES in the indicative mood.

3. The five tenses with the synthetic forms for the first person singular of the regular verb ḡoir, call, are:—

(1.) The present; ḡoirim, I call.

(2.) The consuetudinal or habitual present; ḡoirpeann mé, I am in the habit of calling.

(3.) The past, or simple past, or perfect (for it is known by all these three names); ḡoirpeas, I called.

(4.) The consuetudinal or habitual past; ḡoirinn, I used to call, or I used to be calling.

(5.) The future; ḡoirpeas, I shall or will call.

III. MOODS AND VOICES.

1. The Irish regular verb has four moods:—The Imperative, the Indicative, the Conditional, and the Infinitive. These are the only moods for which the regular verb has distinct inflections.

2. There are, indeed, other moods, which are expressed, not by inflection, but by means of certain conjunctions and particles set before the verb; and these additional moods are given in conjugation in some Irish grammars; but as their forms do not differ from the forms of the four given in the last paragraph, they are not included here.

3. It is only the indicative mood of the verb that has tense inflection; in each of the other moods there is only one tense.

4. There are two voices, the active and the passive. It is only in the active voice that there are personal inflections; in the passive voice, the three persons singular and the three persons plural have all six the same form, rendering it necessary, of course, that the pronoun be always expressed when there is no noun.

IV. CONJUGATION OF A REGULAR VERB.

buail, strike.

Bualte, struck.

IV. RELATIVE FORM OF THE VERB.

1. Besides the forms given in the preceding conjugation, the verb has what is called a "relative form," i.e., a form used after a relative pronoun. In two of the tenses of the indicative mood, namely, the present and the future, the relative form has a distinct inflection, viz., ap, ip, ear, or ior.

2. For instance, "the person who calls," is translated, not by an cé a ðoirið (3rd sing. form), but by an cé a ðoirpeap; and "he who will steal," is not an te a ðoirpíð (3rd sing. form), but an cé a ðoirpeap. In other tenses and moods the relative form is the same as that of the third person singular.

3. This form of the verb is often used even when its nominative is not a relative, but a noun or personal pronoun, to express the "historical present," i.e., the present tense used for the past; as ḡarraigear Aúurigin a h-anam úi, "Amergin asks her name of her." (See for a further account of the historical present, p. 57.)

4. And not unfrequently the relative form is used as an ordinary present; as, Ír mór an t-iongna liompa, nac d'Oúirín iarrpar Fionn mipe, "It is a great wonder to me that it is not for Oisín Finn seeks (iarrpar) me."

V. FORMATION AND USES OF THE MOODS AND TENSES OF REGULAR VERBS.

1. The second person singular of the imperative mood, active voice, is the root or simplest form of the verb, from which all the other persons, moods, and tenses are formed directly, by affixing the various terminations.

2. Verbs which end in a consonant preceded by a slender vowel have all their inflections precisely like those of buair (with the exception mentioned in Par. 4, p. 60); and they all begin with a slender vowel (except sometimes that of the infinitive) in accordance with the rule caol le caol &c.

3. But when the final consonant is preceded by a broad vowel, the synthetic terminations begin with a broad vowel, in accordance with the same rule. A table of the full conjugation of a regular verb ending in a broad vowel is given at page. 64.

4. The root generally remains unchanged through all the variations of the verb, except that it occasionally suffers a trifling change in the infinitive. The cases in which the root suffers change in the infinitive are mentioned in Par. 4. p. 60; See also Par. 8, p. 63.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

1. The present tense is formed by affixing the six personal terminations im (or aım), ır (or aır), &c., to the root.

2. The historical present, i.e., the present tense used for the past, or where past time is intended, is very common in Irish; indeed in many narrative and historical pieces it occurs quite as often as the ordinary past tense in relating past transactions; as, Óala lé, iomoppo, ollınuıǵčear long leir, "as to Ith, indeed, a ship is prepared by him" (instead of ollınuıǵeäð, was prepared).

3. It has been already remarked (Par. 3, p. 56), that the relative form of the verb is often used for the historical present; as nočtar Eıpeııón döıb, "Eremon reveals to them."

Consuetudinal Past and Present.

1. These tenses express customary action; as léıǵeann mé, I am in the habit of reading; léıǵeäð pé, he used to read, or he was in the habit of reading.

2. In the sentences, "I write always after breakfast," and "he sold bread in his youth," the verbs "write" and "sold" are used in the same manner as the Irish consuetudinal tense; except, indeed, that the idea is not so distinctly marked by the English phrase as by the Irish.

3. One of the particles do or po is usually prefixed to the consuetudinal past; and the initial consonant is generally aspirated; as do ḡoiriḡir, they used to call.

4. The Irish peasantry seem to feel the want of these two tenses when they are speaking English; and they often, in fact, attempt to import them into the English language, even in districts where no Irish has been spoken for generations: thus they will say, "I do be reading while you do be writing;" "I used to be walking every day while I lived in the country," &c.

Past Tense.

1. In the past tense the initial consonant is aspirated in the active voice, but not in the passive voice.

2. With the exception of the aspiration, the third singular past tense is the same as the root.

3. One of the particles do or po is generally prefixed to the past tense in both voices; as do ḡearap, I stood; po ḡḡḡap, thou sleepest; do molaḡ iab, they were praised; po buaileḡ é, he was struck.

4. The particle po, used as a mark of the past tense, is often compounded with other particles, the p only being retained, but it still causes aspiration in the active voice, as if it were uncompounded.

5. The principal of these compounds are:—

(1.) Ap, whether? from an and po; as ap buail ré, did he strike?

(2.) ḡup, that, from ḡo and po; as ceuidim ḡup buail ré, I believe that he struck.

(3.) Munap, unless, from muna and po; as munap buail ré, unless he struck.

(4.) Naçap, or na'p, or náp, whether not? from naç and po; as náp buail ré, did not he strike?

(5.) Níop, not, from ní and po; as níop buail ré, no did not strike.*

6. The particle po, as a sign of past tense, is also often combined with the relative pronoun a; as an fear d'ap geallap mo leabap, the man to whom I promised my book. For a further account of this, see Syntax.

Future Tense.

1. All the personal inflections of this tense, in both voices, begin with the letter p, which, in the spoken language, is often sounded like h; thus dúnpad, I shall shut, is colloquially pronounced doonhad (instead of doonfad).

CONDITIONAL MOOD.

1. The particle do, causing aspiration, is often prefixed to verbs in the conditional mood; as do fíubalpann, I would walk.

2. But very often also dá, if, or muna, unless, is prefixed, and with these particles the initial is eclipsed; as dá b-paḡann-ḡe mo poḡa, "if I would get my choice;" muna m-beḡeado ré, "unless he would be."

3. It is important to note that the personal inflections of this mood in both voices, as well as those of the future indicative, all begin with p.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

1. The initial is aspirated in the infinitive, whether the particle do or a be expressed or understood. But in some cases the aspiration is prevented by other grammatical influences, as shown in next paragraph.

* See Second Irish Book by the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language, p. 53.

2. When the infinitive is preceded by one of the possessive pronouns, the initial of the verb falls under the influence of the pronoun.*

(1.) It is aspirated for a, his; mo, my; ʋo, thy (but here the influence of the pronoun is not perceived, as there would be aspiration without it); as ʋá ḡonaʋ, to wound him (literally to his wounding, and so of the others); ʋo m'ḡonaʋ, to wound me; ʋo ʋ'ḡonaʋ, to wound thee.

(2.) It is preserved from aspiration by a, her; as ʋá ḡonaʋ, to wound her.

(3.) It is eclipsed by the three plural possessives; as ʋáɾ n-ḡonaʋ, to wound us; ʋo ʋɾ n-ḡonaʋ to wound you; ʋá n-ḡonaʋ, to wound them.

3. The general way of forming the infinitive is by adding aʋ or eaʋ, the first when the last vowel of the root is broad; the second when the vowel is slender.

4. If the final consonant of the root be preceded by i as part of a diphthong or triphthong, the final vowel is made broad in the infinitive (which is usually, but not always, done by dropping the i); as buai, buaiʋ; ḡom, ḡonaʋ, to wound. But if the final consonant be preceded by i alone, the infinitive is formed according to the general rule in the last paragraph; as miil, miileʋ, to destroy.

5. The infinitives of many verbs are formed irregularly, and these must be learned by practice. The following are a few of such verbs. Each group exhibits a particular type, in which the manner of forming the infinitive will be obvious on inspection.

Root or Imperative.	Infinitive.
éaḡ.	ḍ'éaḡ, to die.
ṛnáṁ.	ḍo ṛnáṁ, to swim.
ól.	ḍ'ól, to drink.
ṭarṛaṁḡ.	ḍo ṭarṛaṁḡ, to draw.
cúṛ.	ḍo cúṛ, to put.
ḡoil.	ḍo ḡól, to weep.
ṁṁṛ.	ḍ'ṁṁṛṭ, to play.
ṁḡil.	ḍ'ṁḡilṭ, to graze.
ḍíḃṛ.	ḍo ḍíḃṛṭ, to banish.
ceil.	ḍo céilṭ, to conceal.
ṛáḡ.	ḍ' ṛáḡḃáil, to leave.
ḡab.	ḍo ḡabáil, to take.
ṭóḡ.	ḍo ṭóḡbáil, to lift.
lean.	ḍo leanaṁam, to follow.
caill.	ḍo cáilleaṁam, to lose.
oil.	ḍ'oileaṁam, to nourish.
ṫoil.	ḍ'ṫoileaṁam to suit.
ḡluar.	ḍo ḡluaraḱṭ, to move.
éiṛ.	ḍ'éiṛṭeaḱṭ, to listen.

THE PARTICIPLE.

1. The active participle is merely the infinitive mood, with some such particle as aḡ prefixed; as aḡ bualaḱ at beating or a-beating.

2. The passive participle is generally formed by adding ṭe or ṭé when the last vowel of the root is slender, and ṭa or ṭá, when broad.

When the root ends in é, ö, l, ll, n, nn, r, é, or ḡ (except verbs in uṁḡ or iḡ), the ṭ of the participial termination retains its sound: after any other consonant, and also in verbs in uṁḡ or iḡ, the ṭ is aspirated. In the passive voice, the terminations ṭar and ṭá follow the same law.

VI. VERBS IN U1ġ, &c.

1. Verbs of two or more syllables with the root ending in u1ġ, or 1ġ, and some other dissyllabic verbs ending in 1b, 1n, 1p, and 1r, differ so decidedly from the model verb in the formation of some of their moods and tenses, that some writers,* not without reason, class them as a second conjugation.

2. The difference lies in the formation of the future and of the conditional in both voices; the other moods and tenses are formed like those of bua1.

3. In bua1, and all other verbs of its kind, the letter p is a characteristic mark of the future and of the conditional mood in both voices, as stated in Par. 3, p. 59.

4. The verbs now under consideration have no p in the future and conditional, but they take in- stead, eó, before the final consonant of the root.

5. In addition to this change, verbs in u1ġ and 1ġ change ġ into é; though in the spoken language of most parts of Ireland, the ġ retains its place.

6. There is no other inflectional difference between these verbs and bua1, the personal terminations following the final consonant of the root being the same in all cases.

7. In the other tenses of the indicative, verbs in 1b, 1n, 1p and 1r are almost always syncopated by the elision of the vowel or diphthong preceding the final root consonant, as co1a1, sleep, co1a1m,

* As for instance the Rev. Canon Bourke in his "College Irish Grammar."

I sleep, &c. (But this change is not regarded as grammatical inflection.)

8. Verbs in uiġ almost always form their infinitive by dropping the i and adding the usual termination oġ; those in iġ alone (not preceded by u), retain the i and take u after it in the infinitive: as comarċuiġ, mark; infinitive, comarċuġoġ; comarpliġ, advise; infinitive, comarpliuġoġ.

9. Sometimes there are other slight changes, caused chiefly by the rule coail le caol &c., which will be obvious on inspection.

10. The following are a few examples of the formation of the present and future indicative, and of the conditional mood, in such verbs. The first person singular only is given in each case, as the other persons have the same terminations as buail and meall.

Root or imper.	Pres. indic.	Future indic.	Conditional Mood.
Diriġ , direct.	diriġim .	dipeoċoġ .	dipeoċaimn .
Ġrādūiġ , love.	ġrādūiġim .	ġrāiġeōċoġ .	ġrāiġeōċaimn .
Labair , speak.	labram .	laiġeōraġ .	laiġeōraimn .
Tappuimġ , draw.	tairnġim .	tairneōnġoġ .	tairneōnġaimn .
Forġail , open.	forġlam .	foirġeōlaġ .	foirġeōlaimn .
Coraġ , defend.	cornaġ .	coirġeōnaġ .	coirġeōnaimn .
Innir , tell,	innirim .	inneōraġ .	inneōraimn .
Dibir , banish.	dibirim .	dibeōraġ .	dibeōraimn .

11. In Munster, verbs in il, in, ir, and ur, are conjugated like those in uiġ or iġ; and the eō comes after the final consonant: thus dibir, banish, is made in the future and conditional, dibeōraġoġ and dibeōraġaimn, as if the verb were dibriġ.

12. A table of the full conjugation of a verb in uiġ (árbuiġ) is given at page 65

VII. IRREGULAR VERBS.

1. There are fourteen irregular verbs, several of which are defective, i.e., want one or more of the moods and tenses. The conjugation of some of them, it will be observed, is made up of that of two or more different verbs.

2. It will also be observed that through all their irregularities, the five synthetic personal terminations remain unchanged; for which reason it is scarcely correct to call these verbs irregular at all.

3. The irregular verbs are as follows:—(1), τάμ, I am; (2), the assertive verb ιρ; (3), βειρμ, I give; (4), βειρμ, I bear; (5), έσμ, I see (including πειρμ); (6), κλμμ, I hear; (7), δέαν-αμ, I do; (8), ζήμ or νήμ, I do; (9), βειρμ, I say; (10), παζαμ or ζειβμ, I find; (11), ιέμ, I eat; (12), ριζήμ, I reach; (13), τείομ, I go; (14), τιζήμ, I come.

4. The following is the synthetic conjugation of the irregular verbs (except in the case of the second verb ιρ, which has no synthetic conjugation). They may be all conjugated analytically, by using the third person singular of each tense with the three personal pronouns singular and plural, as shown in case of the regular verb at page 49. As an example, the analytic conjugation of the present tense of the first verb, τάμ, is given.

(1.) Τάμ, I am.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

Singular.	Plural.
1.	1. βίμίρ, let us be.
2. βί, be thou.	2. βίόϊό, be ye.
3. βίόεαό ρέ, or βίόϊό ρέ, let him be.	3. βίόίρ, let them be.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

Singular.	Plural.
1. τάμ, ατάμ, I am.	1. τάμαοῖδ, ατάμαοῖδ, we are.
2. τάη, ατάη, thou art.	2. τάταοι, ατάταοι, ye are.
3. τά ρέ, ατά ρέ, he is.	3. τάῖδ, ατάῖδ, they are.

Present Tense : analytic conjugation.

1. τά μέ, ατά μέ, I am:	1. τά ρῖνν, ατά ρῖνν, we are.
2. τά tú, ατά tú, thou art.	2. τά ρῖβ, ατά ρῖβ, ye are.
3. τά ρέ, ατά ρέ, he is.	3. τά ρῖαδ, ατά ρῖαδ, they are.

Consuetudinal Present.

1. βῖδῖμ, I am usually.	1. βῖμῖδ, βῖδῖμῖδ, βῖομαοῖδ, we are usually.
2. βῖδῖη, thou art usually.	2. βῖτί, βῖδῖτί, ye are usually.
3. βῖδεανν ρέ, or βῖονν ρέ, he is usually.	3. βῖδ. βῖδῖδ, they are usually.

Interrogative and Negative Present.

(The negative particle is here used: see Par. 3, p. 69.)

1. ní β-ῖμῖμ, I am not.*	1. ní β-ῖμῖμῖδ, we are not.
2. ní β-ῖμῖη, thou art not.	2. ní β-ῖμῖτί, ye are not.
3. ní β-ῖμῖ ρέ, he is not.	3. ní β-ῖμῖδ, they are not.

* These are commonly pronounced in conversation as if the β-ῖμ were omitted in each case; and accordingly they are often contracted in books to ní'lm, ní'lh, ní'ρ, &c.

Past Tense.

Singular.	Plural.
1. Ъѡѡар, Ъѡр, I was.	1. Ъѡѡамар, Ъѡмар, we were.
2. Ъѡѡр, Ъѡр, thou wert.	2. Ъѡѡабар, Ъѡбар, ye were.
3. Ъѡ рѡ, Ъѡ рѡ, he was.	3. Ъѡѡабар, Ъѡбар, they were.

Consuetudinal Past.

1. Ъѡѡнн, Ъѡнн, I used to be.	1. Ъѡѡмѡр, Ъѡмѡр, we used to be.
2. Ъѡѡѡѡ, Ъѡѡѡ, thou usedst to be.	2. Ъѡѡѡѡ, Ъѡѡѡ, ye used to be.
3. Ъѡѡѡ рѡ, Ъѡѡ рѡ, he used to be.	3. Ъѡѡѡр, Ъѡѡр, they used to be.

Interrogative and Negative Past.

(The negative particle is here used: see Par. 3, p. 69).

1. нѡ рѡбар, I was not.	1. нѡ рѡбарамар, we were not.
2. нѡ рѡбар, thou wert not.	2. нѡ рѡбарбар, ye were not.
3. нѡ рѡѡ рѡ, he was not.	3. нѡ рѡбарбар, they were not.

Future.

1. ѡѡѡѡ, I shall be.	1. ѡѡѡѡѡ, we shall be.
2. ѡѡѡр, thou shalt be.	2. ѡѡѡѡѡ, ye shall be.
3. ѡѡ рѡ, he shall be.	3. ѡѡѡѡѡ, they shall be.

|---|--------------------------|
| 1. beidinn, I would be. | 1. beidmír, we would be. |
| 2. beidcedá, thou wouldst be. | 2. beidcís, ye would be. |
| 3. beidceað ré, or beid ré, he would be. | 3. beidí, they would be. |

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Do beid, to be.

PARTICIPLE.

Ad beid, being.

1. Úá is commonly called the substantive verb, and answers to the verb "to be" in English.

2. It has two forms, which the regular verb has not, namely, a form in the present tense for interrogation and negation (ú-fulim), and a form in the past tense for the same (raðar). These two are classed by O'Donovan as a subjunctive mood, present and past tense.

3. The forms ú-fulim and raðar are used only:—

(a.) After negative and interrogative particles; as ní ú-ful ré tinn, he is not sick; ní rað mé ann rín, I was not there: an ú-ful fíon in úar longab? "Is there wine in your ships?" An raðar að an g-carrab? "Wert thou at the rock" (or at Carrick)? O nað ú-ful oul uabð aðam, "since I cannot escape from him" (lit. "since it is not with me to go from him"); an ú-ful a fíor aðar féin, a fíinn? ní ful, ar fíonn, "Is the knowledge of it with thyself, O Finn?" "It is not," says Finn."

(But these forms are not used after the interrogative cionnar, how?)

(b.) After go, that ; as deirim go b-puil i' é rlan, I say that he is well.

(c.) After the relative a when it follows a preposition, or when it signifies "all that" (Par. 3, page 47); as creud é an ppeasra tabair air ar Oha, a go a b-puil rior do loct? "What answer wilt thou give to God, who has a knowledge of thy sins?" (lit. "with whom is a knowledge"); a b-puil ó Cl-cliaç go h-Oileán mór an bhappaig, "all that is from Ath-cliath (Dublin) to Oileán mór an Bharraigh;" do beirim ar m-briaçar naç beag linn a m-beupam go Fionn uiob, "we pledge our word, that we do not think it little, all that we shall bring of them to Finn."

4. This verb, like verbs in general, has a relative form for the present and future; but the relative form of the present is always a consuetudinal tense (whereas in regular verbs it is generally not consuetudinal); as map an ç-céadna bíor (or bídear) an báp an oipéill do ríor ar an dume; "in like manner death is (in the habit of) lying in wait always for man."

5. The analytic form of this verb is now far more common in the spoken language than the synthetic. In asking a question the analytic form is often preferred: but in answering, the synthetic; as an raib tú a go an ç-Cappaig? Óo bíor a go an ç-Cappaig, "Were you at Carrick? I was at Carrick."

6. The letter a is often prefixed to the present tense both in speaking and writing: açá instead of çá, &c.; it is sometimes slightly emphatic, but oftener merely euphonic, and does not otherwise affect the meaning.

7. This verb is often used as an auxiliary, like the verb "to be" in English; and it is the only verb in the Irish language that can be regarded as an auxiliary. Thus, instead of buailtear mé, I am struck, we can say tá mé buailte: for do buaileadh mé, I was struck, do bí mé buailte, &c.

(2.) Ir, it is.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Tense.

Ir, it is: as ir mé, it is I; ir tú, it is thou:

Past Tense.

ba or buò, it was; as ba mé, it was I.

Future Tense.

buò or búir, it will be.

CONDITIONAL MOOD.

bad, it would be,

1. This is commonly called the assertive verb.
2. It has no inflection for person, being always used in the third person singular: hence it is often called the impersonal verb.
3. It has no other moods and tenses besides those given above.
4. It takes other forms in the modern language, some of them contracted, which are often puzzling to learners.
5. After gur, that, it is often made ab, which is given by O'Donovan as a subjunctive mood; as creoim gur ab é atá tinn, I believe that it is he (who) is sick: meaíim dá péir rin, gur ab dá bhiaim agur síce pul puḡadh Abraham éáim Parḡolón i n-Eirinn, "I think, according to that that it is two years and twenty before Abraham was born, that Partholon came to Erin."

6. Very often $\zeta\upsilon\pi$ ab is shortened by omitting the a; as $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\iota\mu$ $\zeta\upsilon\pi$ 'bé, &c.; and sometimes the b is joined to $\zeta\upsilon\pi$, as $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\iota\mu$ $\zeta\upsilon\pi\beta$ é, &c.

7. After $\mu\acute{\alpha}$, if, the i is omitted, as $\mu\acute{\alpha}'\rho$ $\rho\acute{\iota}\sigma\eta$ é. if it be true; and in this case the p is often joined to the $\mu\acute{\alpha}$; as $\mu\acute{\alpha}\rho$ $\rho\acute{\iota}\sigma\eta$ é: $\mu\acute{\alpha}\rho$ $\mu\alpha\iota\tau$ $\lambda\epsilon\alpha\tau$ a $\beta\epsilon\iota\tau$ $\beta\upsilon\alpha\eta$, $\epsilon\alpha\iota\tau$ $\rho\upsilon\alpha\pi$ $\alpha\zeta\upsilon\pi$ $\tau\epsilon\iota\tau$, "if you wish to be long-lived, drink cold and hot" (or "drink cold and flee"—a celebrated Irish saying of double meaning).

8. Sometimes ba or $\beta\alpha$ is shortened to b or β alone, which again is often joined to the preceding word; as $\lambda\alpha\omicron\delta$ δ' $\acute{\alpha}\rho$ β' $\acute{\alpha}\eta\eta\mu$ $\lambda\iota\pi$, or $\lambda\alpha\omicron\delta$ $\delta\alpha\pi\beta$ $\acute{\alpha}\eta\eta\mu$ $\lambda\iota\pi$, "a hero whose name was Lir;" of which the full construction is, $\lambda\alpha\omicron\delta$ $\delta\omicron$ a $\rho\omicron$ $\beta\alpha$ $\acute{\alpha}\eta\eta\mu$ $\lambda\iota\pi$, "a hero to whom was name Lir."

9. There is another form, $\rho\acute{\alpha}$, for the past tense, which is now disused, but which is constantly used by Keating, and by other writers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries: $\rho\acute{\alpha}$ $\tau\epsilon\beta\alpha\eta\eta\epsilon\alpha\pi$ $\alpha\eta$ $\epsilon\alpha\tau$ $\rho\omicron$, "this Ceat was a mighty man;" $\iota\pi$ í ($\beta\alpha\eta\beta\alpha$) $\rho\alpha$ $\beta\epsilon\alpha\eta$ $\delta\omicron$ $\mu\eta\alpha\epsilon$ $\epsilon\omicron\iota\iota$, δ' $\acute{\alpha}\rho$ β' $\acute{\alpha}\eta\eta\mu$ $\delta\iota\beta\eta\eta\eta$ $\epsilon\alpha\zeta\acute{\upsilon}\rho$, "it is she (Banba) who was wife to Mac Coll, whose proper name was Eathur;" $\delta\eta$ é $\alpha\eta$ $\rho\epsilon\omicron\iota\tau\beta\epsilon\alpha\pi\lambda\alpha$ $\rho\acute{\alpha}$ $\tau\epsilon\alpha\eta\zeta\alpha$ $\epsilon\omicron\iota\tau\epsilon\epsilon\alpha\eta\eta$ $\rho\alpha\eta$ $\epsilon\iota\tau\iota\alpha$ $\alpha\eta$ $\tau\epsilon\alpha\tau$ $\delta\omicron$ $\epsilon\pi\iota\alpha\iota\iota$ $\eta\epsilon\mu\epsilon\alpha\delta$ $\alpha\iota\pi\delta\epsilon$, "since it is the Scotic language which was the common tongue in Scythia in the time that Neimheadh emigrated from it."*

10. For the distinction between $\tau\acute{\alpha}$ and $\iota\pi$, see Idioms.

* For the various forms assumed by this verb in the ancient language, see O'Donovan's most instructive article in his "Irish Grammar," p. 161.

OTHER DEFECTIVE VERBS.

1. The following defective verbs are often met with in the modern language.

Air or ar, "says." It is used only in the third person, much like the English defective verb quoth; as, air ré, says he: cpeub do ééunfair dam? ar Diarmaid: "What wilt thou do for me?" says Diarmaid; ééan eóluir éúinn mar a é-fuil ré, ar riab, "give knowledge to us where he is," said they (or say they)." In the older writings this verb is often written ol.

Aτ baé, he (or she) died.

Óar, it seems, it seemed, or it might seem (according to the tense or mood of the verb with which it is connected): Óar liom, methinks or methought; éar leat it seems or seemed to thee; and so on with the rest of these prepositional pronouns singular and plural: Óo rié ré, éar liom, mar an ḡaoié, he ran, methought (or it seemed to me) like the wind.

Óliḡéar, it is lawful, it is allowed.

Dur, to know; éainic ré dur an raib ríab ann, he came (in order) to know whether they were there.

Feadar, I know; used only negatively and interrogatively, and in the present tense: ní feadar mé, I do not know; ní feadar ré, he does not know; an b-feadaraib? do ye know?

Ní puláir, it is necessary (or "must," used impersonally); ní puláir dam a beic air ríubal, "it is necessary for me to be (or I must be) walking (away)."

CHAPTER VI.

ADVERBS, PREPOSITIONS, CONJUNCTIONS, INTERJECTIONS.

I. ADVERBS.

1. There are not many simple adverbs in the Irish language. Far the greatest number of the Irish adverbs are compounds of two or more words.

2. An adverb may be formed from an adjective by prefixing the particle go, which in this application has the same effect as the English postfix ly; as borb, fierce; go borb, fiercely. Almost all Irish adjectives admit of being changed in this manner to adverbs.

3. Besides the adverbs formed in this way, there are many compound adverbs, which are generally made up of a noun and a preposition; the preposition often causing an eclipse.

4. The following is an alphabetical list of the compound adverbs in most general use, with a few of the simple adverbs. Some of the compound adverbs become, in some situations, prepositions:—

A b-pad, far off, in space or time.	A d-topac, at first, in the beginning.
A bup, on this side. (See éall.)	A d-tuaið, northwards.
	A g-céadóir, immediately.

- A ḡ-cém, far off.
 A ḡ-coihnuib̄e, always.
 A ḡ pm, there.
 A ḡ po, here.
 A ḡ rúð, yonder.
 Aip aip, back, backward.
 (See aip éiḡm.)
 Aip ball, on the spot, instantly.
 Aip bič, at all.
 Aip bun, on foundation :
 éup aip bun, to found,
 to institute.
 Aip éeana, in like manner ;
 in general.
 Aip éoið̄e, for ever.
 Aip éiḡm, with difficulty ;
 perforce :—aip aip no aip éiḡm, by consent or by force : nolens volens ; willy nilly.
 Aip ḡ-cúl, backwards, back :
 éup aip ḡ-cúl—the opposite to éup aip bun—to put back, to abolish.
 Aip leič, apart, separately.
 Aip inoð, in a manner ; so that.
 Aip pon, for the sake of.
 Aip uairið, at times ; sometimes.
 Amač, out of, outside.
 Aihám, alone, only.
 Amápač, to-morrow.
 Amuiḡ, outside.
 Anuul, like, as.
 An áip̄e, on high.
 Ané, yesterday.
 Ansof, from below, upwards.
 Ann émp̄eačt, together.
 Ann pm, there.
 Ann po, here.
 Ann rúð, yonder.
 A ndear, southward.
 Anaiče, near.
- Anall, to this side ; hither.
 A nḡap, near.
 Anu, to-day.
 Anoiḡ, now.
 Anonn, to that side ; thither.
 An tan, when.
 Anuap, from above, downwards.
 Aréip, last night.
 Araiin, ever.
 Aris, again.
 Arteač, in, into.
 Artiḡ, in, inside.
 beaḡ nač, little but ; almost.
 Cá h-ap, cað ap, canap, from what ? whence ?
 Cá inéið, how many ? how much ?
 Cár, cá h-ár, oia ár,
 what place ?
 De briḡ, because.
 Do f̄soḡ, always.
 Eaðon, that is ; i.e. ; id est.
 Fá, gives an adverbial meaning to some words.
 Fá éeaðoiḡ, immediately.
 Fá ðeoiḡ, at last.
 Fá óó, twice.
 Fá f̄eač, by turns ; respectively.
 Fa épi, thrice. ḡo bráč, for ever (lit. to [the] judgment).
 ḡo denim, verily ; truly ;
 indeed.
 ḡo ð-čf, unto.
 ḡo f̄óil, yet ; awhile.
 ḡo h-iomlán, altogether.
 ḡo léip, entirely.
 ḡo leóp, enough.
 Iomoppo, however, moreover, indeed.
 Maille pe, together with.
 Map an ḡ-céaðna, likewise ;
 in like manner.

Map aon le, together with.
 No go, until.
 O join ale, from that time out.
 Op cionn, above.
 Sfor, downwards.
 Soip, eastwards.

Suar, upwards.
 Thall, on the other side; beyond. (See Abur.)
 Tamall, awhile.
 Tuille eile, besides; moreover.

II. PREPOSITIONS.

1. The following is a list of the simple prepositions:—

A or i, in; as a mbaile, in the town.
 A, out of, or from (unusual);
 as a Mumain, out of Munster.
 Aδ or aιδ, at, with.
 Aip, ap, upon.
 Ann, in. This takes p before the article. (See page 17.)
 Ap, out of.
 Chum, to or towards, for the purpose of.
 Dap, used in swearing, equivalent to by: dap mo bria-tar, "by my word."
 Do, to. De, from, off, of.
 Eadap, the same as idip.
 Pa or paoi, under.
 San, without.
 So, towards, along with. It takes p before the article an; as sup an d-tid, to the house.

I, the same as a.
 Iap, after. It takes p before the article (an), and becomes iapp.
 Idip, between.
 Im, the same as um.
 Le or pe, with. It takes p before the article (an), and then becomes leip or pip.
 Map, like, as.
 O, from.
 Op, over, above.
 Re, ria, before. It takes p before the article (an).
 Seac, beyond, besides.
 Tap, over, across. It takes p before the article (an),
 and then becomes tapp.
 Tpe, through. It takes p before the article, and then becomes tper.
 Tpid, the same as tpe.
 Um or im, about.

2. Some of the simple prepositions are amalgamated with the personal and possessive pronouns, for which see pages 41, 45.

3. Besides the simple prepositions, there are in Irish a number of compound prepositions. Each of these consists of a simple preposition followed by a noun; and in many of them the initial of the noun is eclipsed by the influence of the simple preposition. In some cases the preposition has dropped out and only the noun remains.

4. The following is a list of the most usual compound prepositions, with their meanings:—

Α ὅ-πιαῖθαίρε, in presence of.

Α ὅ-πόθεν, with, along with.

Α ὅ-ταῖς, in regard to, concerning.

Α ὅ-τιμῶν: see τιμῶν.

Α ὅ-κεῖθεν, at the head of, at the end of, with regard to.

Α ὅ-κοῖνῃ, against, for (in the phrase to go for): πρὸς ὅ-κοῖνῃ α ὅ-εἰλε, "they run against each other:" ὁ ἑὺαῖος πρὸς α ὅ-κοῖνῃ α ἀτάρ, he went for his father.

Α ὅ-κοῖν, by the side of, hard by, along. This is often contracted to κοῖν: κοῖν ἡ ὄριος, "beside the (river) Bride."

Α ἡ-αἰτε, after: α ἡ-αἰτε ἡ λαοῖς ἡμῶν, "after that lay."

Α μετὰ, amongst: πρὸς ἀμετὰ ἡ ὅ-κοιλλῶν, "down amongst the woods."

Α ἰσθμῶν, in presence of.

Α ἰσθμῶν, forward, over against, opposite: οὐκ ἰσθμῶν ἡ ναῦς, to go forward, to progress: ἰσθμῶν ἡ ναῦς ἡ ἀπὸς, opposite (exposed to) the wind.

Α ἰσθμῶν, in front of, opposite: ὁ ἰσθμῶν ὁ ἰσθμῶν α ἡ-ἰσθμῶν ἀπὸς ἡ ἀτάρ, "they used to lie, customarily, in beds opposite their father" (Children of Iir).

Α ἰσθμῶν, on foundation.

Α ἰσθμῶν, for (in the phrase to go for); as α ἰσθμῶν ἡ ναῦς ἡ ἀπὸς ἡ ἀτάρ, "Naisi said to Ardan to go for Fergus."

Α ἰσθμῶν, through, throughout, during: ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη, "during a year."

Α ἰσθμῶν, throughout, amongst ἰσθμῶν ἡ ὄριος, amongst the waves.

Α ἰσθμῶν, behind.

Α ἰσθμῶν, for the sake of, although.

Α ἰσθμῶν, after: α ἰσθμῶν α ὅ-εἰλε, after one another, one after another.

Α ἰσθμῶν, contracted from α ὅ-κοῖν.

Α ἰσθμῶν, as to: ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη, "as to Blanaid."

Α ἰσθμῶν, after: ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη, "after the deluge."

Α ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη or ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη. towards: ἰσθμῶν ἡ βλάστη ἡ βλάστη, "he goes forward towards his ship."

Do cum, towards.

Do réir, according to.

Go nuize, unto, until.

Go d-cí, to, unto, as far as: ruibail go d-cí an dorur, walk to the door.

Iomtúra, as to: iomtúra Fhinn, "as to Finn."

Fá tuairim, towards.

Láim le or láim re, near, by, beside: ruid láim liom, sit near me; láim re beannaib boirce, "beside Beanna Boirche."

Or cionn, over, above: Dhauid Dia or cionn sac uile nid, "love God above all things:" ro éirid or cionn an gaoi, "he rose over the spear."

I g-cionn, the same as a g-ceann: i g-cionn na bliadhna,
"at the end of the year."

Tar ceann, besides, for the sake of, beyond, in preference to.

Tar air, backwards; same as air air.

Tar éir, after; the same as déir: tar éir na Samna,
"after the Samhain (1st of November)."

Timceall, about, around: teacht timceall Dhiarmada,
"to go around Dermot."

Or comair, in presence of, before the face of: or comair Fhinn, "in presence of Finn."

III. CONJUNCTIONS.

1. There are few simple conjunctions in the Irish language.

2. There are, however, many compound conjunctions, much like the English conjunctive phrases, "for the reason that," "to the end that," &c.

3. Generally speaking, the meanings of the compound conjunctions may be easily gathered from the signification of the words that compose them; but there are a few whose meanings are not so plain.

4. The following is a list of the simple conjunctions with their meanings, together with those of the compound conjunctions whose meanings are not quite obvious.

Αἰετ, but, except.	Ῥυρ, that: formed of the preceding and ρο: see p. 58.
Αἰετ δεανα, but however.	Ἰονά, ἰνά: see νά.
Αῖϋρ, and; often contracted to α'ρ, αρ, and 'ρ.	Ἰοννυρ ῶο, in order that, so that.
Αἰρ an αἰῶν ριν, wherefore.	Ἰνά, if.
Αν, an interrogative particle: αν ἕ-ρῆν ῖ ρί ρλάν? Is she well?	Ἰνά τά ῶο, although that.
Αρ, the same as the last, only used with the past tense. See. p. 58.	Ἰναρ, as: see muna.
βῖσοῦ, although: it is really the third singular imperative of the verb τάμ.	Ἰμνα, if not, unless; often written μνρ, and even (corruptly) μαρ.
βῖο: see ῶῖο.	Ἰμαρεῶ, if so, well then.
βῖν, as.	Ἰναρ ριν, μαρ ρο, in that manner, in this manner: thus.
Ῥά, if: sometimes written Ῥά μο.	Νά, than: see ἰονά.
Ῥο ἕρῖῶ, because.	Νά, nor, not.
Ῥο ἕμν ῶο, in order that.	Νῶ, or: often pronounced νῦ in Munster.
Ῥῶρ, yet, moreover.	Ο, since, seeing that, because.
Ῥῖο or Ῥῖοεῶ, although.	Ο ἕάρλα, since, whereas.
Ῥο, that.	Οἰρ, because.
Ῥοναῶ αἰρε ριν, wherefore.	Ῥυρ, before.
	Ῥυμε ριν, therefore, wherefore.

IV. INTERJECTIONS.

1. The following is a list of the most common interjections. Besides these there are many interjectional expressions somewhat like the English, "O shame!" "Alack! and well-a-day!" but it is not necessary to enumerate them:—

Α, the sign of the vocative case, usually translated O.	Μονάριε, O shame!
Αρ τρῦαῶ. alas! what pity!	Μονυαρ, alas! woe is me!
Εἰρε, hush! list!	Μο ἕρῦαῶ: see αρ τρῦαῶ.
Ῥαραρ, Ῥαραοἰρ, alas!	Οἰ, uἰ, alas!
Ῥαραοἰρ ῶερ, alas! O sharp sorrow!	Οἰόν, or uἰόν, alas! written οἰάν or uἰάν in old writings.
Ῥεῶ, see! behold!	Ολαῶν, alas!
Μαρῶ, woe! O sad!

CHAPTER VII.

PREFIXES AND AFFIXES.

1. There are in Irish, as in other languages, prefixes and affixes, which modify the meanings of words.

I. PREFIXES.

1. The following is a list of the principal prefixes with their meanings: it will be observed that many of them have a double form, which arises from conformity to the rule caol le caol &c.

2. Most of these are inseparable particles; but a few are also employed independently as separate words.

Cup or eip, back or again, like English re: as íoc, payment; aipíoc, repayment, restitution: eipḡe, rising; eipeipḡe resurrection.

Am or aím, a negative particle, like English un: as peíð, open, clear; aímpeíð, difficult, rough.

An, an intensitive particle: as luaḡḡáirpeac, joyful; as anluaḡḡáirpeac, overjoyed.

An or aín, a negative particle, like English un: as trác time; antrác, untimely: máan, desire; amíman, evil desire.

Aé, a reiterative, like English re: as ráð, a saying; aéráú, a repetition.

Aé has sometimes the meaning of English dis in dismantle: as cuma, a form; aécumað, to deform, to destroy; riogáð, to crown or elect a king; aétriogáð, to dethrone.

Ban, feminine (from bean, a woman); as eaclaó, a messenger; ban-eaclaó or bain-eaclaó, a female messenger.

Bíe or bíoe, lasting, constant: as beó, living; bíeḡe, everlasting.

Córh, equal : English co or con : as aimpeap, time ; córh-aimpeapac, contemporary.

Deaz, deið, good : as blap, taste ; deazblap, good or pleasant taste.

Ói, óio, a negative, like English dis : as céillibe, wise ; óicéillibe, foolish : ceann, a head ; óiceannaó, to behead.

Óroc, óroic, bad or evil : as obair, a work ; óroc-obair an evil work.

Óo and po are opposites, as are also often the letters o and p. Óo denotes difficulty, or ill, or the absence of some good or positive quality : as paicepanac or po-paicepanac, visible ; do-paicepanac, invisible : óolár, tribulation ; pólár, comfort : donap, ill luck ; ponap, good luck : do-óeunta, hard to be done ; po-óeunta, easy to be done : óubaó, sad ; puóac, merry.

Ea, a negative, often causing eclipsis : as óamgcan, strong ; éadamgcan, weak : cóip, just ; éazóip, injustice : cpom, heavy ; éacpóm, light.

Eap, a negative : as onóip, honour ; eaponóip, dishonour : pán, healthful ; eapán, sick : caipdeap, friendship ; eap-caipdeap, enmity.

Fo, under : as óume, a man ; foóume, an under-man, a common man, a servant.

Fpuc, against, back, contra : as buille, a stroke ; fpucbuille, a back stroke : bac, a hook ; fpucbac, a back-hook, a barb.

Il, iol, many : as iomac, much ; iliomac, sundry, various : óac, a colour ; iolóacac, many coloured : paóbar, an edge ; iolpaóbar, many-edged weapons.

In, ion, fit : as óeunta, done ; inóeunta, fit to be done : paóce, said ; ionpaóce, fit to be said.

Lán, full, used as an intensitive : as aióóéil, vast ; lánaióóéil, awfully vast.

Leac, half : as uap, an hour ; leacuap, half an hour. This word is also used to denote one of a pair : thus púil, an eye ; leac-púil (literally half an eye), one of two eyes. See "Idiom, No. 13."

Mí, mío, a negative : as meap, respect ; mímeap, disrespect : cóinaple, advice ; míócóinaple, evil advice.

Nearn, neim, a negative : as coimriðce, comprehensible ; nearncoimriðce, incomprehensible : nó, a thing ; neim-nó, nothing.

Reum, before, like English pre : as paóce, said ; reum-paóce, aforesaid.

Ro, an intensitive particle : as móip, great ; ró-móip, very great Sár, an intensitive particle: as maít, good; rár-maít, very good.

So, poi, the opposite to do, denotes apt, easy, good as deapb̄ta, proved; poi-deapb̄ta, easily proved.

Up or úp, an intensitive particle: as ípeal, low; úpípeal, very low, humble, mean, vile.

II. AFFIXES OR TERMINATIONS.*

1. The following is a list of the principal affixes or terminations, with their meanings; but it does not include inflectional terminations, which are all given in connection with declensions and conjugations.

Ác̄, when it is the termination of an adjective, means full of, abounding in, like the English y and ous, with the former of which it seems cognate; as b̄raíḡean, the black-thorn; b̄raíḡeanac̄, abounding in black-thorn: b̄raíḡar, a word; b̄raíḡrac̄, wordy, talkative.

Ác̄, as the termination of a noun, generally denotes a personal agent; as cúmaic̄, power: cúmaic̄ac̄, a mighty person: Connaic̄taic̄, a native of Connaught.

Ác̄t, an abstract termination, like the English ness and ty (in probity): as cap̄tanaic̄, charitable; cap̄tanaic̄t, charity: móp̄ and móp̄ta, great; mop̄taic̄t, greatness.

Áiḡe, uíḡe, or íḡe, a personal termination, denoting a doer; as cor, a foot; coríḡe, a walker: tíomán, drive; tíomán-aiḡe, a driver.

Áipe or ípe, a personal termination, denoting an agent or doer; as lop̄ḡ, a track; lop̄ḡaipe, a tracker: ceal̄ḡ, guile; ceal̄ḡaipe, a deceiver.

Ámaíl has the same meaning as the English like and ly: as plaíḡt, a prince; plaíḡteamaíl, princely.

Án, a diminutive termination, but it has now nearly lost its diminutive sense; as lōc̄ a lake; lōc̄án, a small lake.

Áp or eap, and sometimes the letter p alone, a termination denoting abstract quality, like ac̄t; as aoiḡimn, delightful; σοῦβνεαρ, delightfulness or delight: ceann, a head; ceannar, headship, authority.

* For a full account of these terminations see the author's "Origin and History of Irish Names of Places." Second series, Chaps. I. and II.

ḡhap and ḡpe have a collective or cumulative sense; as buille, a leaf; builleabap, foliage: ḡair, an oak; ḡairḡpe, a place of oaks.

Chap has a collective sense like the last; as beann, a peak or gable; beannchāp, abounding in peaks or gables.

Ōe, an ancient adjectival termination, has much the same meaning as the English ful and ly (in manly). In the modern language it is varied to the forms ḡa, ḡā, and τa; as mōp, great; mōpḡā, majestic: fear, a man; fearḡā, manly: mīle, a champion; mīleāḡta, champion-like, knightly.

Ū denotes abstract quality, like aḡt; as pinn, fair or white; pinne, fairness: boḡ, soft; buiḡe, softness.

In, a diminutive termination. This may be said to be the only diminutive that still retains its full force in the living language; and it is much used in Ireland even where Irish is not spoken. ḡḡchāp, a road; ḡḡchāpīn (boghreen), a little road: crusk, a pitcher; cruiskcen, a little pitcher.

Laḡ, naḡ, paḡ, taḡ, τpaḡ, have all the same meaning as aḡ, namely, full of, abounding in; as brip, break; bripḡeāḡ, a breach, a complete defeat: muc, a pig; muclāḡ, a piggery: luaḡchāp, rushes; luaḡchāpnaḡ, a rushy place: boḡ, a bog or soft place; boḡpaḡ, a place full of bogs: coill, a wood; coillḡeāḡ, a woody place. These seem to be cognate with the terminations in the English words poult-ry, varic-ty, &c.

Oḡ, a diminutive termination; as cīar, black; cīarḡḡ, a black little animal (a clock): ḡābal, a fork; ḡābalḡ, a little fork.

Oip, or ḡōip, or τōip, denotes an agent or doer, the same as the English er in reaper; as buail, strike; buailḡeōip, thresher: conneal, a candle; conneōip, a candlestick: ppeal, a scythe; ppealāḡōip, a mower.

Re has a collective signification, like ḡap; as beul, the mouth; bēlpe, language, speech.

Seāḡ is used as a sort of feminine termination; as ḡall, an Englishman; ḡallḡeāḡ, an Englishwoman: ḡīnḡeāḡ, a female fool (from an old root ḡn, whence the old word ḡn mīτ, a fool, the equivalent of the modern amāḡān).

ḡaḡ and τpaḡ: see laḡ.

SYNTAX.*

NOUNS.

1. When two nouns come together signifying different things, the second one is in the genitive case; as guc gaoir, the voice of a hound; i b-plaicior Epeann, "in the sovereignty of Erin;" barr na h-inne, the top of the island.

The noun in the genitive always follows the noun that governs it.

2. When the genitive noun is singular masculine, its initial is aspirated if the article is used; as mac an rir, the son of the man. (See pages 17, 18, for this rule and its exceptions).

3. When the article is not used with the governed noun in the singular number, the initial of the latter is generally not aspirated (except in the case mentioned in next Rule); as Conall i g-crotaib bair, "Conall in the forms of death;" a n-dolar broidhe ar peine, "in the sorrow of bondage and of pain."

* Several of the rules of Syntax have been unavoidably anticipated in Orthography and Etymology, as they are in every Irish Grammar. These rules will be referred to in their proper places in this Syntax, or repeated when thought necessary.

4. When the noun in the genitive is a proper name, its initial is generally aspirated, even though the article is not used; as plioct Ḡhaoiðil, "the race of Gaodhal;" cloiðeam̃ Mhanannam, "the sword of Manannan."

Exception:—In this case, ð and τ often resist aspiration (p. 34); as Eipe m̃gean Dealbhoið, "Eirè, the daughter of Dealbhaoth."

5. If the governed noun be in the genitive plural, its initial is eclipsed with the article, (for which see page 18); and the initial is generally aspirated, if the article is not used; as Ḑamgen mac n-Uirneac̃, "the fortress of [the] sons of Usna;" buibean cupað, "a company of knights;" biaip ban, "two women" (or rather "a pair of women").

Even in the absence of the article however, an eclipsis sometimes occurs; as naoi naonbar do bí aḡ ceac̃t ðiappað c̃opa aḡur cána ð-peap n-Eipionn, "nine times nine persons who were coming to demand the taxes and tributes of the men of Erin."

Sometimes also, in the absence of the article, the noun in the genitive plural is neither aspirated nor eclipsed.

6. When two nouns come together signifying the same thing (or in apposition), they generally agree in case; as Nuaða Airḡiobláim̃ mac Eac̃taig̃ mic Eavaplam̃, "Nuadha Silver-hand, son of Eachtach, son of Eadarlamh;" na ð-τρί ð-Pinneam̃na, mac Eoc̃aioð, "of the three Finnavnas, sons of Eochad."

Here, in the first example, Nuaða is nominative, and so is mac, which is in apposition to it; Eac̃taig̃ is genitive, and so is the next word, mic, which is in apposition to it. In the second example, Pinneam̃na is in the genitive (plural), and mac also, in apposition to it, is in the genitive (plural).

For exceptions to this Rule, see "Idioms," No. 33, p. 129. See also next rule.

7. The last rule is not always observed: departures from it are sometimes found, even in good Irish writings; as, ḡáinnioð buiðe órho map bídeadh ar Mháire, bean Sheagáin an rígeadhóra,

 "yellow gold rings as used-to-be on Mary, wife of John (the son of) the weaver;" éinig níg Chiar-ruide luachra d'áir a óimhálta, eadhon, Cian mac Oiliolla, "the King of Kerry-Luachra came to visit his foster-son, that is, Cian, the son of Oilioll: do éiriall (Óscar) a z-coinne Mheargaidh iníre, an tréan leóman "Oscar went to meet the furious Meargach, the strong lion."

The first example exhibits a disagreement in case between Mháire and bean, which are in apposition, the former being dative (after ar), the latter nominative (its dative would be mnáoi, p. 29). In the second example óimhálta is genitive (after the infinitive, Rule 15, p. 112), and Cian, in ap-position to it, is nominative (its genitive would be Céin). In the last example Mheargaidh is genitive, and leóman, in apposition to it, is nominative. This last example however, seems properly to belong to a class of exceptions to Rule 7 which are explained further on ("Idioms:" No. 33, page 129).

8. A noun used adjectively in English is commonly expressed in Irish by a genitive case; as English, "a gold ring," Irish, fáinne óir, a ring of gold. This form of expression is very common in Irish; as fear dlíge, a lawyer; literally "a man of law."

9. Collective nouns are singular in form, and as such they take the singular form of the article (when the article is used); but they are plural in signification, and as such they generally take adjectives and pronouns in the plural number, and also verbs in the plural, when, in accordance with Par. 9, p. 50, the plural form of the verb is used; as, nochtuid an cúipeann rin, "that company disclose;" tanḡadur an buidean cupad rin do láchar Fhinn, aḡur do beannuidh ríad do, "that company of knights came to the presence of Finn, and they saluted him."

The personal nouns from diar to deicneadar, mentioned at page 39, follow this rule: as do hadar an diar rin zó h-impearnaó, "that pair were at strife."

10. Nouns denoting a part commonly take de with the dative of the nouns (or pronouns) of which they form a part; as ḡaḡar d'ár nḡaḡaraib, "a hound of our hounds;" aon éaop oioḡ, "one berry of them;" ḡaḡ oúine de'n pḡbul, "each person of the people."

11. The personal nouns from diaḡ to deicneabap inclusive (p. 39,) and also teḡra, three, generally govern nouns in the genitive plural; as diaḡ ban, "two (of) women;" a épiúr mac aḡur a ḡ-ḡriur ban, "his three sons and their three wives;" teḡra ban, "three women;" naonḡap ḡaioḡeaḡ, "nine chieftains."

But they sometimes take de with the dative as in last rule; as naoi naonḡap do máoraib na ḡ-ḡómaḡaḡ, "nine times nine of the stewards of the Fomorians;" mo ḡḡ mac, mo ḡḡ d'ḡeapaib, "my two sons, my two men."

CHAPTER II.

THE ARTICLE AND NOUN.

1. The article agrees with its noun in number, gender, and case; as an ḡeap, the man; na cípe, of the hen; na ba, the cows.

2. For the influence of the article on the noun, see p. 17.

3. When one noun governs another in the genitive, the article can be used only with the latter. Thus, in English we can say "the age of the world" (using the definite article with each noun); but in Irish, the corresponding expression is, aíḡ an doimn, not, an aíḡ an doimn.

Exception:—When a demonstrative pronoun follows the governing noun, or when the two nouns come together as a compound word, the governing noun may take the article; as an ḡ-oidé múinte, the teacher; má do beip tú an ḡḡeaḡ pín dúnna 'pan ló po na n-deḡp, "if thou givest so much to us in this day of tears." Here the article is used before both l6 and de6p. Tanḡadap apir i n-Eirinn an plic6t po Shimeon 6hpic, "these descendants of Simon Brec came again into Erin:" here the article is used before plio6t, the governing noun.

4. When a possessive pronoun is used with the genitive noun, the article cannot be used with either; thus, "the house of my father" is tea6 m'a6ap, not an tea6 m'a6ap.

The peculiarity noticed in the last two rules exists also in English when the possessive case is used, i.e., the article can be used only with the possessive noun; as the world's age; my father's house.

5. When a demonstrative pronoun is used with a noun, the article is also used; as an p6ap rin, that man, literally "the man that;" na mná 6d, yonder women: literally "the women yonder."

6. The article is used before the names of some countries and cities, where the definite article would not be used in English; as Moenan, abb Ca6pa6 Pupa ipm Ppamc, 66uḡ, "Moenan, abbot of Caher Fursa, in (the) France, died;" Cpua6a na h-Eipeann, "the stacks of (the) Erin;" tuairceapz na h-Apna, "the north of (the) Asia." There is in Irish also a form of phrase corresponding to the English "the mighty Hector;" as an t-Opcap áḡ, "the noble Oscar."

7. When an adjective is predicated of a noun by the verb ip (in any of its forms), the article is used with the noun (but in the corresponding expression in English the definite article would not be used); as ip maic6 an p6ap 6, he is a good man: literally "he is the good man."

9. The Irish article is used before abstract nouns much more commonly than the English definite article; as an t-ocpup, the hunger; cpí n66 do 6im:—an peaca6, an báp, a'p an pían, "three things I see, the sin, the death, and the pain."

CHAPTER III.

THE ADJECTIVE AND NOUN.

1. Adjectives denoting fulness or a part of anything may take either the dative after de or the genitive; as (dative after de):—idur óa bápaile lán de leann, “between two barrels full of ale;” tá mé lán do náipe, “I am full of shame;” mórán d’uairib, “many of nobles:” (genitive):—lán a óuirn, “the full of his fist;” an paib mórán airgid aige, “had he much of money?” cpaob bpaioigin agur a lán áirnead uirpe, “a branch of blackthorn and its full of sloes on it.”

2. The adjective in the comparative degree takes ná (or má or ioná) before the noun which follows it; as ir binne a ceól ná lon ’rúdá rmod, “sweeter is her voice (music) than the blackbird and than the thrush.”

Exception:—If the adjective in the comparative degree has de (“of it”) after it (see Idiom 39, p. 132), then ná is not used; as naç bu feirpde óób é, “that they would be none the better of it.”

AGREEMENT AND COLLOCATION OF THE ADJECTIVE AND NOUN.

FIRST CASE: When the adjective is joined immediately with the noun.

When the adjective is joined immediately with the noun as a qualifying or limiting term (as in the English “a high tower”), in this case the following ten rules apply.

1. The natural position of the adjective is after its noun; as cablaç mór, “a great fleet.”

The chief exceptions to this are stated in the next two rules.

2. Monosyllabic adjectives are often placed before their nouns; as caol-ḡear, "slender man;" mór ḡairrḡe, "great sea;" ḡub-ḡarrḡaḡ, "black rock."

3. This is especially the case with the following adjectives, some of which are hardly ever used after their nouns: ḡeaḡ, good; ḡroḡ, evil; ḡíor, true; nuḡḡ, new; ḡean, old; ḡuaḡ, left-handed.

Numeral adjectives form another exception, for which see next chapter.

4. When a name consists of two words, the adjective comes between them; as Sluaḡ aḡbal-mór luḡḡra, "the tremendous-large Slieve Lougher;" Eamum mḡn ḡluinn Maḡa, "the smooth beautiful Eman Macha."

5. When the adjective follows its noun, it agrees with it in gender, number, and case; as ḡear maḡḡ, a good man; ḡḡeul na mná móipe, "the story of the large woman" (gen. sing. fem.); ar an aḡḡéir ionḡanḡaḡḡ, "on the wonderful abyss" (dat. sing. fem.).

6. When the adjective follows its noun, the initial of the adjective is aspirated under the circumstances already stated in Par. 6, page 10; or eclipsed in the circumstance stated in Par. 3, page 34.

7. When two or more nouns are joined together, and are followed by an adjective which qualifies or limits them, all and each, the adjective agrees with the last: in other words, it is the last noun only that influences the adjective both in grammatical inflection, and in initial change; as bean aḡur ḡear maḡḡ, a good woman and man; ḡear aḡur bean maḡḡ, a good man and woman.

8. When the adjective precedes the noun, as in Rules 2 and 3, above, it does not agree with the noun, i. e., it is not influenced by the noun, either as to inflection, or as to initial change; in other words, the simple form of the adjective is used, whatever be the number, gender, or case of the noun; as mór uairle, "great nobles;" do mór uairlib, "to [the] great nobles;" bán énoic Éireann, "the fair hills of Erin;" luat bapca, "swift barks;" féor rgeul, "a true story;" féor rgeulca, "true stories."

9. When the adjective precedes the noun, the adjective and the noun are sometimes regarded as one compound word; and the initial of the noun is aspirated (in accordance with Par. 4, page 10): also the vowel of the adjective is often modified by the rule caol le caol &c.; as Deirdre an Dubh-pleibe, "Deirdre of Dubh-Shliabh;" óig-bean, a young woman.

10. When the adjective precedes the noun, the initial of the adjective is subject to the same changes as if the adjective and the noun formed one word, i. e., one noun; as gáire na n-óig-fear, "the laughter of the young men;" an t-árdo-ollamh rín, "that chief professor;" an t-pean-bean boct, "the poor old woman."

SECOND CASE: When the adjective is connected with the noun by a verb.

When the adjective, instead of being joined immediately with the noun, is predicated of, or ascribed to, the noun by a verb of any kind (as in the English, "the man is tall," "he considered the man tall," "he made the knife sharp," "the roads were made straight"), in this case, the following three rules apply.

1. When an adjective is predicated of a noun by the verb tá, it follows the noun, the order being:—verb, noun, adjective; as tá an lá breá, the day is fine.

2. When an adjective is predicated of a noun by the verb ip, it precedes the noun, the order being:—verb, adjective, noun; as ip bpeáğ an lá é, it is a fine day.

3. When an adjective is ascribed to a noun by a verb of any kind, the adjective does not agree with the noun, i.e., the adjective is not influenced by it, either initially or inflectionally; in other words, the simple form of the adjective, without inflection, is used, whatever be the number or gender of the noun; and the initial of the adjective is neither aspirated nor eclipsed (unless under the influence of some other word), as ip aibinn do éuain acar do éalaipuiré acar do mağa minpocé-aca caemáilne, “delightful are thy harbours, and thy bays, and thy flowery lovely plains:” ağur epocne péíteað ap na n-dačúğað deapğ, “and rams’ skins dyed red.”—(Exodus, xxv. 5).

The first example (from the story of the Children of Usna), exhibits both an agreement according to Rule 5, page 101, and a disagreement according to the present rule. For the three nouns are plural, and the two last adjectives which qualify them directly are in the plural form, while the first adjective aibinn (modern aibinn) which is asserted of them by ip, is in its simple form (the plural would be aibinne or aibne). In the second example epocne is plural, while deapğ is singular (plural deapğa).

Observe the difference in meaning in the following, according to agreement or disagreement:—Do piğne pé na bpaic ġlapa; do piğne pé na bpaic ġlap: in the first the adjective agrees with the noun, (both being plural), showing that it qualifies it directly (Rule 5, p. 101) and that the meaning is, “he made the green mantles;” in the second there is no agreement, (the adjective being singular and the noun plural), showing that the adjective is connected with the noun by the verb (Rule 3 above), and that the meaning is, “he made the mantles green.”

CHAPTER IV.

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES.

1. A numeral adjective, whether cardinal or ordinal, when it consists of one word, goes before its noun; as τρῑ ρῑρ, three men; ραν̄ θαρᾱ η̄-αῑτ, "in the second place."

2. Numeral adjectives, both cardinal and ordinal, from 11 to 19 inclusive, take their nouns between the simple numeral and θε̄ᾱζ; as τρῑ ρᾱρ̄ᾱλλ̄ θε̄ᾱζ, thirteen horses; αν̄ τρε̄αρ̄ ρᾱρ̄ᾱλλ̄ θε̄ᾱζ, the thirteenth horse.

3. Ο̄ον, one; θ̄ᾱ, two; ε̄ε̄ᾱθ, first; and τρε̄αρ̄, third, cause aspiration; as ᾱον̄ ρ̄ε̄αρ̄, one man; θ̄ᾱ ρ̄ῑνᾱοι, two women; αν̄ τρε̄αρ̄ ρ̄ε̄ᾱτ, "the third occasion."

4. The numerals ρε̄ᾱτ, ο̄ε̄τ, ρᾱοι, and θεῑε̄, cause eclipsis (except the noun begins with ρ, in which case there is no change), as ρε̄ᾱτ μ-βλιᾱθ-να, "seven years;" ο̄ε̄τ μ-βα, "eight cows;" ρᾱοι η̄-αῑθνε, "nine rivers;" θεῑε̄ η̄-ρῑρ, "ten men."

5. The numerals τρῑ, τε̄ῑρε, κῡῑζ, ρε̄, the ordinals (except ε̄ε̄ᾱθ and τρε̄αρ̄: Rule 3 above), and the multiples of ten, cause no initial change; as τε̄ῑρε ζᾱθᾱρ, "four hounds."

6. Ο̄ον, one, and all the multiples of ten, take their nouns in the singular number; as ᾱον̄ λ̄ᾱ, one day; ε̄ε̄ᾱθ̄ ceann, a hundred heads (lit. "a hundred head," just as we say "a hundred head of cattle"); τρῑ κᾱο̄ζᾱθ̄ λᾱο̄ε̄, "three times fifty heroes;" μῑλε̄ βε̄αν, "a thousand women."

third person singular masculine; as ḃá m-béidṡr ṡṡr Cipeann an ḃap n-aḡaiḃ, naḃ bu ṡeippḃe ḃóib é, "if the men of Erin were against you, they would not be the better of it;" (here the pronoun é stands for the sentence).

3. The accusative forms of the personal pronouns are often used as nominatives: always with ṡr (see Rule 18, p. 113), and with passive verbs (see Rule 20, p. 113); and sometimes with other verbs; as máṡ maṡ na leaḡa ṡib, aṡ éipṡn, "'if ye are the good physicians,' says he."

II. POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

1. A possessive pronoun is never used without a noun.

In English there are distinct forms of the possessive pronouns which can stand without nouns (mine, thine, hers, &c.), but there are no forms corresponding to these in Irish.

2. The possessive pronouns precede their nouns; as mo máṡaṡr, my mother; a ḡ-carbaḃ, their chariot.

3. The possessives mo, my; ḃo, thy; and a, his; aspirate the initials of their nouns; as mo ḃeann, my head; ḃo ḃor, thy foot; a meup, his finger.

4. The possessive a, her, requires the initial of its noun in its primitive state (neither aspirated nor eclipsed), and if the initial be a vowel, it prefixes h; as a máṡaṡr, her mother; a h-aṡaṡr, her father.

5. The possessives áṡr, our; ḃaṡr, your; and a, their; eclipse the initial consonants of their nouns (except ṡ, on which they exert no influence), and prefix n to vowels; as áṡr ḃ-ṡṡr, our country; ḃaṡr m-ba, your cows; a n-aṡaṡr, their father.

6. Possessive pronouns amalgamated with prepositions (see p. 45) have the same influence over the initials of their nouns, as they have in their un-compounded state; as dom érhoë, to my heart; óna ð-σίρ, from their country.

7. The manner of using the emphatic increase after the possessive pronouns has been already pointed out in Par. 3, page 45. For an additional Rule of possessives, see Rule 2, page 105.

III. RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

1. The relative follows its antecedent and precedes its verb; as an té a íuibalpar, the person who shall walk.

2. The relative aspirates the initial of its verb; as an laò a íapb an τ-ατὰò, "the hero who slew the giant." To this the next rule is an exception.

3. When the relative a signifies "all that" (see p. 47) it eclipses the initial of its verb; as a b-puil ó Ghailib buò òear, "all that is from Galway southwards;" do péip a n-dubramar, "according to what we have said."

4. When the relative a is governed by a preposition, expressed or understood, and is followed immediately by a verb to which it is not the nominative, the initial of the verb (except p) is eclipsed; as a pé nuò imoppa dá ð-τάνιc a báp " (the following) is the circumstance, indeed, from which came his death;" an boic ina n-ítoisip, "the tent in which they used to eat;" a dubairc Pionn go n-diongnad (píç) gíò bé nóp a n-diongnad Ìiarmaid í, "Finn said that he would make (peace) in whatever manner Diarmaid would make it" (here the preposition ann is understood:

ḡið bé nór ann a n-ðionḡnað Ðiarmaid í, whatever the manner in which Diarmaid would make it.) (See next rule).

5. If, in the case stated in the last rule, the verb is in the past tense, with the particle po or do, the initial of the verb is not eclipsed, but aspirated (Pars. 1 and 4, p. 58); as áit ar éuit Ðara Ðearḡ, "the place in which fell Dara Dearg."

6. The relative precedes the verb which governs it in the accusative (as in English); as an tír a ḡraðuiḡim, the country which I love.

7. As the relative has no inflection for case, the construction must determine whether the relative is the nominative to the verb which follows it, or is governed by it in the accusative; as an cara a ḡraðuiḡið mé, the friend whom I love; an cara a ḡraðuiḡear mé, the friend who loves me.

8. The relative is often omitted both in the nominative and in the accusative; as oḡlaoð do ñunnur Nín ñic Þéil éaimic uaið do þraé na Eirionn, "a youth of the people of Nin Mac Peil (who) came from him to view Erin." An leabap po reriob (Cambrenur) do éuararḡbaul Eirionn, "the book (which) Cambrensis wrote on the history of Erin."

9. The relative a is often disguised by combination with other words and particles, especially with po, the mark of the past tense; as an tír ór éaimic me, "the country from which I came" (here ór = ó a po); pláḡ lép marbað noí mílo díob, "a plague, by which were killed nine thousand of them" (here lép = le a po); an tír dá ð-éaimic ré, the country to which he came (dá = do a); lá ðap comópað aonaé le ruz Eiréann, "a day on which was convoked an assembly by the king of Erin" (ðap = do a po); ní beaḡ liomra ap

Íoloinnear féin map eiric, "I do not think it little what I have named as an eric." (Cp= α po, in which α means "all that:" Par. 3, page 47.)

IV. DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

1. The demonstrative pronouns follow their nouns or pronouns; as an fear rin, that man; cia h-é rin? who is that?

Exception:—When the verb is in any of its forms is understood; as rúð bap ð-cuid, "yonder (is) your meal;" ro an lá, this is the day.

2. If the noun be followed by one or more adjectives, the demonstrative pronoun comes last; as cia an fear ballac binnbriacá úð? "Who is that freckled sweet-worded man?"

V. INTERROGATIVE AND INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

1. An interrogative pronoun comes first in the sentence; as cá b-fuil mo leabap? where is my book? cia an laoc úð ar gualainn ðhoill? "who is that hero at the shoulder of Goll?"

This rule holds good even when the interrogative is governed by a preposition, i.e., the preposition follows the interrogative that it governs; as cad ap tu? out of what (place art) thou? ðo de map tá tú? how do you do? (literally "like to what art thou?") cpeud fá ap eirðeabap, "what for did ye rise?"

2. When uile precedes its noun, it means "every;" when it follows the noun it means "all;" as plán ón uile galap, "sound from every sickness;" da baðad an cine daona uile ðo h-aon octap, "all the human race was drowned, all to (except) a single eight."

There are occasional exceptions; as oponð anbriopad ip na h-uile fubáilcib, "people ignorant in all virtues" (in this passage from Keating, uile means "all" though it precedes its noun).

CHAPTER VI.

THE VERB.

1. As a general rule the verb precedes its nominative; as do gluar Fergus, "Fergus went;" do claoiöcaö Mac Garraidh, "Mac Garraidh was defeated." (See next Rule.)

2. When the nominative is a relative or an interrogative pronoun, it precedes the verb; and sometimes also in poetry, the nominative, even though a noun, precedes the verb; as an te a fuabalpar, the person who will walk; creud atá ann? what is here? Öeöpaioöte píoipa ðan pöit ðan pop mianaid a ö-típ 'r a n-öútöar, "perpetual exiles without pause or rest, long-for their country and their native-home."

3. When the verb is transitive, i.e., when it governs the accusative (see Rule 9, p. 111), the usual order is verb, nominative, object; as do aigel Conööbar öopaö, "Conchobhar addressed Borach;" do líon Öpáinne an copu, "Grainne filled the goblet."

4. But when the accusative is a relative or an interrogative pronoun, the usual order is, pronoun (or accusative), verb, nominative; as an laöc a öonairc mé ané, the hero whom I saw yesterday; caö öeir tú? what sayest thou?

5. When the verb tá is used, the usual order is, verb, nominative, predicate; as táid na peulta po-lonnaiö, the stars are very bright.

6. When the verb ip, expressed or understood, is used, the usual order is, verb, predicate, nominative; as ba öinne a ölóp ná ceöl na n-éun, "her voice was sweeter than the music of the birds:” ní fada uait an áit, “not (is) far from thee the place.”

Exception.—If the article is used before the predicate, or if the predicate is a proper name, the order is, verb, subject, predicate; as is tuar an tír go-aoibinn, “thou art the delightful country;” is mé Cian mac Cainte, “I am Cian, the son of Cainte:” an tu Finn? “art thou Finn?”

7. The only cases in which there is agreement between the verb and its nominative, are (1) when the nominative and verb are both third person singular; (2) when a noun or pronoun in third plural has a verb in third plural, in accordance with Par. 9, p. 50.

It may be doubted whether (1) is a genuine case of agreement; and the general absence of agreement between verb and nominative is further exemplified in the following rule.

8. When two or more nouns, whether singular or plural, joined by a conjunction, are nominatives to one verb, the verb has the third person singular form; as do gluair breap agur na druidíe pómpa, “Breas and the druids went forward.”

9. A transitive verb governs the noun or pronoun which is the object of the action, in the accusative case; as bual é, strike him; do cuirceadair Tuatha De Danann ceó druidíeadaí n-a d-timceall féin, “the Tuatha de Dananns put a magical mist around themselves.”

10. The initial of a verb in the infinitive mood is aspirated, unless the aspiration is prevented by some special influence. For such an influence see Par. 2, p. 60.

11. The preposition le or pe before the infinitive active often gives it a passive signification; as (leabair eile) atá pe b-fairin i n-Éirinn, “(other books, which are to be seen in Erin.”

But in many such constructions the preposition expresses purpose, and the signification is active; as agur do n-bíó ollain pe dénaí peile ar a céile, “and that they are ready to do treachery on each other.”

12. The infinitive, even without the preposition le, has often a passive signification; as Ḥiácpa mac Ailene tigeapna Muḡḡopn do iarbað, “Fiachra, son of Ailene, lord of Mourne, to be slain” (lit. “Fiachra, &c., to slay”): agur an fear nað tiorpað (an cíop) rin uaíð, a ípón do buain óna ceann de, “and the man who would not pay that tribute from him, his nose to be cut off from his head.”

13. One verb governs another that follows it or depends upon it in the infinitive mood; as da m-bað nað raðpað clanna Mhoirne d’iappaið na ḡ-caop rin, “if it were so that the Clann Morna had not come to seek those berries.”

The following very important rule was first enunciated by O’Donovan, and is given here in his own words (“Irish Grammar,” p. 337.)

14. “When the governed verb is one expressing motion or gesture, which does not govern the accusative, the sign do is never prefixed; as dubaipz pé hom dul ḡo Corcaig, he told me to go to Cork.”

15. If the noun which is the object of a transitive verb in the infinitive mood follows the verb, it is in the genitive case; as tanḡaoap cablað mór do óéanaí coḡuað, “a great fleet came to make war” (nom. coḡuað, war, gen. coḡuið); do mullað élonne líp, “to kill the children of Lir.”

16. A noun or pronoun which is the object of a transitive verb in the infinitive mood often precedes the verb, and in this case it is (not in the genitive, as in the last rule, but) in the accusative; as, agur ípeað do ḡmoð, dá éuaílle do éur ið-tal-maí agur ceann an t-ínaícte do éeanḡal da ḡað cuaille óioð, agur uball do éur aip mullað cuaille aca, “and it is what he used to do, two poles to put in the earth, and the end of a thread to tie to each pole of them, and an apple to put on the top of a pole of them.”

17. The active participle of a transitive verb governs the noun which is the object of the action, in the genitive case; as aḡ bpuic̄neað an ðip, "smelting the gold" (lit. "smelting of the gold"); ðo bí an ḡaoðal ro aḡ múnab̄ rcol, "this Gaodhal was teaching schools" (lit. "teaching of schools"); aḡ tocaic̄t na talman, "digging the ground."

18. The verb ip in any of its forms expressed or understood, takes the accusative form of a personal pronoun as its nominative; as ip í céabpað ðpoinḡe pe peancup, "it is the opinion of some historians;" ip mic̄ piḡ ḡo r̄ipinneac̄ iab̄, "they are truly sons of a king;" aḡup r̄iapraic̄gear an piḡ cia h-iab̄ r̄éin, "and the king asks who they (are)."

19. The verb ip is very often omitted, especially in negative and interrogative sentences, and in answers to questions; as beača an r̄aparaibe r̄ipinne, "truth (is) the food of the historian;" ceann Ḍhiapmuda Uí Ḍhuiḡne an ceann úð, "that head (is) the head of Diarmaid O'Duibhne;" cia tupa? m̄ip̄i lollan, "who (art) thou? I (am) lollan;" an r̄ip̄o r̄in, "whether (is) that true?" ní m̄ip̄i, "(it is) not I."

20. A verb in the passive voice takes the accusative form of a personal pronoun as its nominative; as ḡeantap̄ é, it is done; buaic̄teap̄ iab̄ they are struck.

CHAPTER VII.

PREPOSITIONS.

1. A simple preposition governs the dative (including the ablative, for which there is no distinct inflection); as éáinic ré go Corcaig, he came to Cork; ag cor an τ-pleíbe, at the foot of the mountain; airínd cuid do na h-úgðaraib, "some of the authors reckon." (See next rule for exception.)

2. The preposition idir generally governs the accusative in the singular, and the dative in the plural; as idir Corcaic agus Limerick; idir na cóigeaib, "between the provinces."

3. The prepositions ann, go, iar, ria, le orpe, and tar, take r before an, the article, the r being sometimes joined with the preposition and sometimes with the article; as annr an leabap or ann ran leabap, in the book; leir an b-pear, with the man. (See par. 7, page 17.)

4. The compound prepositions govern their nouns in the genitive; as do ruig an tonna rir a n-aḡaid an énuic, "he brought the tun with him against the hill;" a b-riaðnuirpe b-pear n-Eiríonn, "in presence of the men of Erin;" do ḡluarpeadar clann Tuireann pompa d'ionnruidé an éata, "the children of Tuireann went forwards towards the battle."

The following prepositions, éum, towards; dála, as to; déir, after; iomcúpa, as to; meapḡ or aneapḡ, amongst; péir, according to; and timéioll, about, although having the form of simple prepositions, are in reality compound, and take their nouns in the genitive. See end of Par. 3, p. 83.

As a compound preposition consists of a noun governed by a simple preposition, it is in reality the noun-part of the compound preposition that governs the noun in the genitive, in accordance with Rule 1, page 95: thus the expression above, a n-aḡaid an énuic, is literally "in the face of the hill," where énuic is governed in the genitive by aḡaid, face; and so of the other 3.

5. The simple prepositions, except do, de, gan, and idir, generally cause eclipsis in singular nouns when the article is used; as ó'n ḡ-cnoc rín, "from that hill;" aḡ an m-baile na h-inne ríap, "at the town of the island in the west." (See pages 17, 18.)

6. The simple prepositions generally cause aspiration when the article is not expressed; as aḡ barr an époinn, "on the top of the tree;" ó múraib na Teanraç, "from the ramparts of Tara."

Exception 1: a or i, iap, and ḡo (when it means "with") cause eclipsis without the article; as a m-baile aḡa cliaç, in Baile-atha-cliaith (Dublin); iap n-dóinn, "after the deluge."

Exception 2: aḡ. le, and sometimes ḡo, cause no change in the initial, and ḡan may either aspirate or not; as rlan le Maig. "farewell to (the river) Maigue;" o'n τ-Sionunn roip ḡo parrḡe, "from the Shannon east to the sea."

7. When a simple preposition ending in a vowel comes before the possessive a (whether it signifies his, her, or their), the letter n is inserted between the vowels; as tre n-a bapab, "through his hands;" an lá ḡo n-a lán τ-poillre, "the day with its abundant light."

Except after do and de; as tabair féur dá éapall give grass to his horse; bam ḡeug d'a ḡ-crann, take a branch from their tree.

Before any other word beginning with a vowel, the letter h is usually inserted after these prepositions; as do éuaib re ḡo h-Albam, he went to Alban (Scotland).

PART IV.

I D I O M S .

AN idiom, in the sense in which it is used here, may be defined:—An expression that has acquired by usage a certain meaning, which becomes lost in a word-for-word translation into another language; so that in order to convey the true meaning in that other language, the form of expression must be changed.

Thus, “ṡá an leabap ag an duine” is an idiom, for its sense is lost in the word-for-word translation, “the book is at the man;” and in order to convey the true meaning, the English expression must be changed to “the man has the book.”

Idioms constitute one of the chief difficulties in learning any language; and the student is recommended to master this Part, in which the principal idioms of the Irish language are explained and illustrated.

1. The Infinitive governing Possessive Pronouns.

The infinitive of a transitive verb governs its object in the genitive (Syntax, Rule 15, p. 112). When the object, instead of being a noun, is a personal pronoun, then, according to the analogy of the Rule quoted, it should be in the genitive case. But the genitive of a personal pronoun is a possessive pronoun; and possessive pronouns precede the words they refer to; so that the pronoun which represents the object of the action, is a possessive, and precedes the infinitive, influencing its initial as if it were a noun (see Syntax, p. 106, Rules 3, 4, 5). This gives rise to idiomatic expressions like the following, which are of very frequent occurrence.

English.	Irish.	Contracted to.
To strike {	me,	do mo bualað,	dom' bualað.
	thee,	do do bualað,	doð' bualað.
	him,	do a bualað,	ḃá bualað.
	her,	do a bualað,	ḃá bualað.
	us,	do áp m-bualað,	ḃáp m-bualað.
	you,	do ḃup m-bualað,	(not contracted) them,	do a m-bualað,	ḃá m-bualað.

These may be translated literally, "to my striking," "to their striking," &c.

A like construction prevails in the case of a transitive participle: aḡ a bualað, striking him: aḡ a bualað, striking her: aḡ án m-bualað, striking us, &c. In this construction the participle may itself be governed in the genitive case by a noun:—éáinic mían a mapḡca ḡam féin, "a desire to kill them, has come to me" (lit. "a desire of the killing of them," or "of their killing.")

2. Compound Prepositions governing Possessive Pronouns.

A compound preposition governs the genitive (Rule 4, p. 114); and when the governed word is not a noun but a personal pronoun, this last becomes a possessive, and goes before the noun-part of the compound preposition, giving rise to idiomatic phrases, corresponding with those quoted in last Idiom. Example: air fon, for the sake of; air a fon, for his sake; air ḡur fon, for your sake, &c. ḡo éuaíð ḡiarmaid dá h-éir, Diarmaid went after her: táinic tinnear orra fein, aḡur ar a rhuóc 'n-a n-ḡiaíð, "sickness came upon themselves, and on their posterity after them."

A similar construction often occurs with the compound adverbs. Example: tar air, backwards; ḡo éuaíð fé tar a air, he went backwards; ḡo éuaíð rí tar a h-air, she went backwards; ḡo éuaíð ríad tar a n-air, they went backwards, &c.

3. To die.

"To die," is very often expressed in Irish by a phrase meaning "to find death:" the verb faḡ, find, being used for this purpose, in its various forms; as, an ḡara bhiaḡain dá éir rin fuair Irial bár, "the second year after that Irial found death;" aḡur máir ann atá a n-ḡán ḡain bár ḡ'páḡail, "and if it be here that it is in fate for me death to find" (i. e., "that it is fated for me to die.")

There is, however, a single verb ḡ'eug, meaning to die, but it is not used so often as the above. The following example exhibits both forms:—A ḡeir cuíð ḡo na fean-uḡḡaraid ḡur ab a n-ḡleann da loca fuair naomh ḡad-nuig bár; bioð ḡo n-abraid ḡpunḡ oile ḡurab ann Αρδμαέα δ'εуз ρό, "some of the old authors say that it is in Glendalough St. Patrick found death, although another party say that it is in Armagh he died."

4. Nominative Absolute.

What is called the nominative absolute in English is expressed in Irish by the preposition aip (on), or iaip (after), placed before the participle, and the preposition do (to) before the noun; which will be understood from the following examples:—aip m-beit̃ ãã řada do Chormac ãã ã b-řeitiõñ, "Cormac, having been a long time watching them" (lit. "on being a long time to Cormac a-watching of them"): ãzup aip m-beit̃ ollaiñ don lunñ, "and the ship being ready" (lit. "and on being ready to the ship"); ãzup aip n-dul a lunñ dõib̃, "and they having gone into a ship:" (lit. "and on going into a ship to them"): iaip m-beit̃ t̃reañ ip an t̃ip dõib̃, "they having grown strong in the country" (lit. "after being strong in the country to them").

5. To have no help for a thing,

The Irish phrase corresponding to this is "to have no strength (neart) on a thing:" the "having" being expressed in accordance with Idiom 34, p. 130. Nĩ b-řuil neart ãzum aip an ñõ řm̃, I have no help for that thing—I cannot help that (lit. "there is to me no strength on that thing"). Ãzup a dũbair̃t̃ Ğrainne nãc řaib̃ neart aice řeiñ aip, "and Grainne said that she had no help for it" (or "could not help it," "could not have prevented it"). Sometimes l̃eĩgear̃, remedy or cure, is used in the same way as neart.

6. To cause a thing to be done.

To cause a thing to be done, to have it done, to see that it is done, to order it to be done, is often expressed in Irish by dõ eip (or dõ eabair̃t̃) řã deara, "to put (or bring, or give), under notice." Ãzup řõ eip̃ Miodhãc řa n-deara ũip̃ Iñpe Tuile dõ eip̃ řuib̃, "and Miodhach caused the mould (or soil) of Inis Tuile to be placed under you:" do řũz̃ (řĩř̃) b̃reac̃ b̃air̃ aip an m-b̃reit̃eaiñ, ãzup euz řa deara a ẽrõcãõ " (the king), passed sentence of death on the judge, and had him hanged" ("put under notice him to hang," or "his h̃nging").

7. Number of individuals of which a company is composed.

The number of individuals of which any collection of persons or things is made up, is often inserted, in the nominative form, in a narrative sentence, without any syntactical connexion with the rest of the sentence. Αδυρ ταιμικ λιρ ηουμικε αρναμαραδ, καοζατ καηρηεαδ, ο Σηιοτ βυιδδ Δειρηδ. "and Lir set out on the morrow, fifty chariot-men, from Shee Bove Derg" (i.e., with fifty chariots): αδυρ ταιμικ βοδδ Δεαρηδ, ναοι κεαδ ηιεεαδ, δα η-ιωνηρηιζε; "and Bove Derg came, twenty-nine hundred men, towards them."

This is like the English:—"The duke began his march next morning, 20,000 strong."

8. Passive Verbs used impersonally.

A passive verb is often used impersonally; as ζαδρηα ουζαηηη αμαδ, αδυρ ηι λαηρηα ηυλιυζαδ ορη, "come forth to us and no one will dare to wound thee:" (literally, "and it will not be dared [to put] wounding on thee).

This form of expression is of very frequent occurrence in the older narrative writings:—thus instead of "they advance; they plunge into the (river) Crond," the writer expresses himself in this way:—"it is advanced; it is plunged into the Crond."

9. Nominatives before Infinitives and Participles.

Instead of the usual assertive construction, consisting of a verb with its nominative (noun or pronoun), the following construction is often adopted:—the verb is put in the infinitive or participial form, and the subject (whether noun or personal pronoun) is placed before it, the pronoun being in the accusative form (but whether the noun is nominative or accusative cannot be determined, as there is no distinction of form); as ηρ αηλαδ βι Ναιρη αδυρ Δειρηδρε, αδυρ αν κεηηδαηη εκαρηα, αδυρ ιαδ αζ ημρηε υρηηε, "it is in this manner Naisi and Deirdre were (seated), and the Cenn-chaimh (a chess board) between them, and they playing on it; ηρ αηλαδ δο βι Κοβθεαδ, αδυρ ε αζ ηεαρηαδ, "it is thus Cobhthach was, and he pining away;" κυρηοη ηεουλα ζο βλαεηηυδ ε ηειη δο βειε αν ηηη, "he sends word to Blaid, he himself to be there" (i.e., "that he himself was there").

This form of expression is often adopted even when the verb or participle is (not expressed but) understood; as $\delta\omicron\ \epsilon\upsilon\iota\eta$ (an $\epsilon\acute{\upsilon}$) a ceann a n-u $\acute{\epsilon}$ t Θ hiamuda a ζ ur $\acute{\epsilon}$ ina $\acute{\epsilon}$ odla “(the hound) put her head in the breast of Diarmaid, and he in his sleep.”

10. One person meeting another.

“Donall met Fergus” is often expressed in Irish in the following way:— $\Theta\omicron$ cara δ Φ ep ζ ur a η Θ oinnall; literally “Fergus was met (or turned) on Donall.” $\Theta\omicron$ cara δ Δ oibell na Craige léite opuinn, “we met Eevel of Craglea” (lit. “Eevel of Craglea was met [or turned] on us”): ϵ ia cara δ e opm a $\acute{\epsilon}$ t Φ tuai δ -bean, “whom should I meet but the fair woman” (“who should be met on me”).

The same idea is expressed by the verb ϵ apla, happened: a ζ ur ϵ apla o ζ la δ opp ϵ a ap m-bo ζ a δ , “and they met a youth on the moor” (lit. “and a youth happened on [or to] them”): ϵ piallu δ $\zeta\omicron$ Shia δ M η r $\zeta\omicron$ ϵ apla banba $\zeta\omicron$ n-a δ raoi ϵ i δ oppa ann, “they travel to Slieve Mish until they met Banba with her druids there” (“until Banba with her druids happened on[or to] them there”).

11. Although: Although not.

ζ ion $\zeta\omicron$ or ζ ion ζ ur has two opposite meanings which can only be distinguished by the general sense of the passage: sometimes it means “although” (or “although that”), and sometimes “although not.”

Although:—a Φ hinn, ap Or ζ ar, ζ ion ζ ur Φ oi ζ re mo ζ aol δ uire na $\delta\omicron$ Θ hiamu δ O’ Θ uibhne, “‘O Finn, says Oscar, ‘although my relationship with thee is nearer than to Diarmaid O’Duibhne.’”

Although not:— $\delta\omicron$ b $\acute{\epsilon}$ puim c \acute{o} ma η le m \acute{a} e δ i δ , a Chlann U η ri ζ , ζ ion $\zeta\omicron$ n- δ e $\acute{\epsilon}$ ta η li δ í, “I shall give a good counsel to you, O sons of Usna, though it will not be done by you;” ζ ion ζ ur $\acute{\epsilon}$ e $\acute{\alpha}$ pp δ mná an n δ Φ m, “although that proceeding would not be the business of a woman.”

12. To be able.

To be able to do a thing is expressed in different ways. The most usual is by phrases of the type, η Φ e δ u η le, “it is possible with;” as η Φ e δ u η l’om a δ eana δ , I can do it (lit. “it is possible with me to do it:” see Idiom 1.)

Another, and more idiomatic way, is by the verb ϵ i ζ im, “I come," in its various moods and tenses; and with this verb "I can do," or "I am able to do," is expressed by "it comes with me to do;" as muna ð-tiġeað ru an ċailleaċ ð'amap, "unless he would be able to strike the hag" (lit. "unless it would come with him the hag to strike"); aċt nio ðoilġe ru in in map a ta ib ar ð-tiġ ru in ru ġa oile að ðio b, "and we think more grievous than that, how our three champions are bound in our presence, and that we are not able to free them:" n ċu ir eann u al aċ o pp ann n aċ ð-tiġ l inn a io mċ ap, "he puts not a burden on us that we are not able to bear."

Sometimes the verb tá or ir is used instead of tiġ, and also the preposition aġ instead of le; as ó n aċ li om ðul ón ġ-con ta bair t ro, "since I cannot escape from this danger" ("since it is not with me to go from this danger": here ir is understood): ó n aċ b-ru il ðul u ai ð aġum, "since I cannot escape from him" ("since it is not with me to go from him": here tá and aġ are used, as in "possession:" Idiom 34.

13. One of a pair.

One of a pair is often expressed by the word leat, half: leat-ċor, one foot (lit. half-foot). In this compound the word leat is used adjectively, so that leat-ċor means, not half of a foot, but a half-foot (i.e., a foot which is itself a half, i.e., half of a pair). So also leat-ġúil, one eye, leat-taob, one side, &c. Ir a n l ai ð do b i an ru ġ ru n aġur leat-l an a ru ġ ib a ru, "it is thus that king was, and one hand of silver on him."

14. To be alone.

The word aonap, which the dictionaries now interpret as meaning "alone," was originally a concrete numeral noun like triúr, cúġeap, &c. (p. 39), and meant "one person;" and this meaning it retains to some extent in its present application:—do ru ub al mé a'm aonap, I walked alone (lit. "I walked in my one person" [see Idiom 42]: or "I walked as one person"); do ru ub al tú a ð' aonap, thou walkedst alone: do ru ub al ru n-a h-aonap, "she walked alone," &c.; am aonap ru eal a ru ub al b io eap, "alone, of a time, walking I was."

Another way of saying in Irish "he is alone" is "he is with himself:" tá mé li om féin, I am alone ("I am with myself"): tá tú leat féin, thou art alone: tá ru a leo féin, they are alone: tá mo má t er ín n-a co ð la ð, aġur m ure li om féin, "my mother is asleep, and I am alone."

15. One thing given for another.

When you give or take, sell or buy, one thing for another, it is expressed in Irish by saying you give it, &c., on that other, the preposition air being used. Do tuog pé trí ba air an g-capall rin, he gave three cows for that horse: air Eirne ní 'neórainn cia h-í, "for Erin I would not tell who she is" ('neórainn for inneórainn: see p. 63).

In this sense, the preposition air is set before the noun of price: do ceannuigear an b6 bán rin air pé púint, I bought that white cow for six pounds: ní h-iongna ar Cormac, óir ip maic an luac tuagar uirpe, "'No wonder,' says Cormac, 'for good is the price I gave for it.'"

16. Debt.

The fact that Donall owes Fergus money, or that Donall is under any obligation to pay money to Fergus, is expressed by saying, "Fergus has money on Donall," the preposition air being used before the name of the debtor, and the act of "having" being expressed by tá and a3 as in Idiom 34. Tá trí púint a3 Fergur air Doimnall, Donall owes three pounds to Fergus: tá bean eile a n-Éocail a b-puil aici coróin air, there is another woman in Youghal to whom he owes a crown ("to whom is a crown on him"): ip amlaib do bí an rí3 ro, a3ur efor cáin móp tnom a3 Fómorai3 ar Tuatha Dé Danann pe n-a linn, "it is how this king was, and (that) the Fomorians had a great heavy tribute and rule over the Tuatha De Dananns during his time" ("a great heavy tribute and rule was with the Fomorians on the Tuath De Dananns").

17. Asking, entreating, &c.

To ask, request, entreat, or demand of a person, is expressed by "to ask, &c., on that person:" iaip air Dha na 3r3pa rin, "ask of God those graces."

18. Sensation, suffering, &c.

That a person is hungry, thirsty, cold, afraid, sick, &c., is expressed in Irish by saying that hunger, thirst, cold, fear, sickness, &c., is on him, the preposition air being used: tá fuac3 c3m (cold is on me), I am cold; ná bíod eagla ort (let not fear be on thee) be not afraid: do bí tap3 móp air Sheafan (great thirst was on John), John was very thirsty; ca3

é rin ort? (what is that on thee?) what ails you? A cúiple mo éroide creud f an ðruaim rin ort? "O pulse of my heart, what is that frown on thee?"

19. One person entertaining feelings (of love, hatred, &c.) towards another.

That Donall entertains certain feelings towards Fergus is expressed by saying that Donall has such feelings on Fergus; the preposition air being used before "Fergus," and the act of "having" being expressed by τά and αζ, as in idiom 34:—ní mó an cion no bá αζ Aonghur ortra ná an cion no bá αζ muinntir Aonghura ar níac an peacátaire. ζo raib formad mór ar τ'áair pá n-a cionn rin, "not greater was the affection Aonghus felt for thee than the affection the people of Aonghus felt for the son of the steward, so that thy father felt great jealousy on that account" (lit. "not greater was the affection which was with Aonghus on thee, so that great jealousy was on thy father on the head of that:" see Idiom 32).

Where the agent is not specified, a similar form of expression is retained: you are loved, is expressed by love is on you: you are esteemed, by estimation is on you, &c.: τά meap αζur cion mór air Orcair (great esteem and love are on Oscar), Oscar is greatly esteemed and loved.

20. To know: to know a person.

To know is usually expressed in Irish by the phrase knowledge is with me, I have knowledge; and to know a person by "to have or to give knowledge on a person:" "αζur on b-puil a þior αζαδ þéin, a Þhinn?" "ní b-puil, ar Þionn:" "do you know it, O Finn?" "I do not," says Finn" (lit., is its knowledge with you, O Finn? It is not, says Finn): an áil leat þior d'páðair? do you wish to know? ("is it a desire with you knowledge to get?"): bioð a þior αζατ, a leuðéóir. "know O reader" ("be its knowledge with thee, O reader"): (strangers are seen coming towards Finn and his party), no þiaarrað Þionn do éác an d-tuza-dar aítne orpá, "Finn asked of the others did they know them" (lit. "did they put knowledge on them"): αζur tu-ζairpe aítne orp, "and thou knewest" (lit. "and thou didst put knowledge on me").

21. To part from, to separate from.

To separate from a person is expressed in Irish by "to separate with a person," the preposition le or pe being used: much in the same manner as we say in English, "I parted with him:" ṛcaṛabap féin aḡur Óiarmaid pe n-a céile, "they themselves and Diarmaid separated from each other:" ḡo ṛcaṛ pé rinn, "he separated from us;" ṛcaṛ Oṛcaṛ le Óiarmaid, "Oscar separated from Diarmaid:" ḡo ṛcaṛ rir, "he separated from him;" aḡ Cuirac Cill'-dara ḡo ṛcaṛar le ḡraḡ mo ériḡe, "at the Curragh of Kildare I parted from the 'love of my heart,'"

22. However great, however good, however brave, &c.

Da placed before some abstract nouns gives a meaning which, though it is well understood in practical use, has puzzled grammarians to analyse and explain, and which will be best understood by a few examples. From the adjective álainn, fine or beautiful, is formed áilne or áille, fineness, beauty; and da áilne or da áille, means "however fine," "how fine soever." Examples:—Ní b'-puil pionúr dá ineb, nac b'-cuil-lob, "there is no punishment however great that they do not deserve:" an tpeap ḡeir, ḡan comraḡ aomfir dá tpeiri ar talman d'obaḡ, "the third injunction, not to refuse single combat to any man on earth, however mighty:" deamán ná diaḡal dá tpeipe lám, "demon or devil, however mighty of hand."

23. Both one and another: both these and those.

Both, in such phrases as "both men and women," is often expressed in Irish by the preposition ibir, between; as bain-piḡ Óia ráraim diḡb ann ḡac rocaṛ d'a b'-cuḡ dḡib ibir céill, ceapadaib, aḡur conac íaoḡalta, "God will exact an account from them in every advantage He has given to them between understanding, senses, and worldly prosperity:" cúig-míle ibir pearaib aḡur mnáib, five thousand, between men and women (i.e. both men and women, or reckoning men and women).

24. To overtake.

To overtake a person is often expressed by "to bear on a person," the verb beir, bear, being used with the preposition air. Examples:—Fágbam an tulaic ro ar eagla go m-beirfeadh Aonghus an Dhróga oppuinn, “let us leave this hill for fear that Aonghus of the Brugh would overtake us:” leanur air a lorg go réimdíreac iad do’n Mhúnam, go ruig oppa a’ Solcóid, “he follows them on their track directly to Munster, so that he overtook them at Solchoid.” Go naic féinidír an fonn rin nó go m-beirfeadh Maraia Síde oppa, “that they might not leave that territory till the fairy cavalcade should overtake them:” fanfaidh leat ar an láthair ro nó go m-beiridh orm arís, “I will wait for thee at this place till thou overtake me again:” gac aon air a m-béarfaim, “every one whom I would overtake” (“every one on whom I would bear”).

25. To win a game on a person.

To win a game on a person is expressed by “to put a game on him:” asur do éog Oisín an fear rin, asur ro éur an cluicé ar Fhionn, “and Oisín moved that (chess-) man and won a game on Finn:” asur ní ruigamar an báire ar a céile, “and we did not win the goal on each other” (i.e. neither of us won the goal on the other.)

26. To think long, short, well of, ill of: to think hot, cold, hateful, &c.

Such phrases as “it seemed long to him,” “he thought it long,” are expressed by the verb ir and the preposition le: ir faida liom (“it is long with me”), it seems long to me, I think it long. Asur do bo faida le na bhráithrīb do b’ Órian uata, “and his brothers thought it long that Brian was away from them” (“it was long with his brothers, &c.”): ir olc linn ar bean ríot, “we think bad of what has happened to thee” (“it is evil with us:” ar = a ro, and a means “all that:” see p. 47): tuigimí naic ionúim leat me féin, “I understand that thou dost not love me” (“that not beloved with thee am I myself”).

Observe the difference in meaning conveyed by the two prepositions le and do: ir maic é do’n b-fear rin, it is advantageous to that man (whether he thinks it so or not): ir maic é leir an b-fear rin, that man thinks it advantageous (whether it is really so or not). The following example shows both forms:—ba maic liom riuéal acat nór maic dam é, I wished to walk, but it was not good for me.

27. To wish for: to like: to be glad of: to prefer.

After the same manner, a desire, wish, liking for, &c., is expressed by such words as mian, desire; aic, pleasure; áil, will or pleasure, &c.: ir áill liom ríor d'fáigáil, I wish to know ("it is a desire with me knowledge to get"): do éuirpínn féin rúil an éaic rin ad h-uéct a n-ionad do rúil, ar fear diob: do b'aic liom rin, ar an dóirreoir, "'I would put the eye of that cat in thy lap in place of thy eye,' says a man of them. 'I would like that,' says the door-keeper."

The word féarr, better, is used in the same way to express preference: ir féarr liom do dearbhrácair ná túra, I prefer thy brother to thyself: I would rather have thy brother than thyself (lit. "thy brother is better with me," &c.); do b'féarr le bhrígd leabhar maic ná airgead Brigid would prefer a good book to money (lit. "a good book would be better with Brigid," &c.). The following example shows the application of both mian and féarr:—Ní h-é ir mian leir an uédar (ní mo, ní h-é ir mian liom-ra) tu do bneugan; aóct ir é dob' féarr leir rin (aóur liom-ra) do éroidé do fealbuéad: "it is not what the author wishes (neither is it my wish) to amuse thee (tu do bneugan) but it is what he would prefer (and I also) to possess thy heart."

Féarr followed by le expresses mental preference as shown above: but féarr followed by do is equivalent to the English expression "better for," "better that," &c. ir féarr éomra anoir, ar lué, ríor na h-earec úd do tábairec éaoid. Ir féarr éana, ar iadran, 'it is better for me now,' says Lugh, 'a knowledge of that eric (fine) to give you.' 'It is better indeed,' say they."

28. To think little of—much of—to grudge.

Similar to the preceding is the use of the words beag and mór (little and much) in several idiomatic phrases, which occur very frequently, and which will be best understood by the following examples:—Ir mór liom an luac rin, I think that price large ("that price is large with me"): *óir dá m-beic mac aóinne iona fúide pompa, níor beag leo do éuir dár marbaó é, "for if (even) a child of us would be sitting ("in his sitting:" see Idiom 42) before them, they would not deem it (too) little cause to kill us" (lit. "it would not be with them a small [thing] for a cause to kill us:" for dár marbaó: see Idiom 1): *dár mo briaéar ar

Nairi ní beḡ lúne rín uair, “‘by my word,’ says Naisi, ‘we do not think that small from thee.’”

The two expressions ir mór le and ní beḡ le (it is much with, it is not little with) are used to express the idea of unwillingness or grudging: ir mór liom aon pínḡín do éab-airc do, I think it much—I grudge—to give one penny to him: the very same idea is expressed by ní beḡ liom aon pínḡín, &c., I think it not little—I grudge—one penny, I think one penny enough, &c. The two reverse expressions (ní mór le—ir beḡ le) are used to express willingness—not grudging, &c.: ní mór liom na trí ba ro do éabairc do, I do not think it much—I am quite willing—I do not grudge—to give him these three cows; which might also be expressed by saying, ir beḡ liom, &c.—I think it little—I would give more, I would have more, I would want more; I am willing—I do not grudge, &c.—do beirimid ár m-briachar, ar ríad, naḡ beḡ linn a m-beupam ḡo Fionn doḡ, “‘we give our word,’ said they ‘we think it not small—we grudge—what (a = all that: see p. 47) we shall bring of them to Finn.’” (See Mr. Standish O’Grady’s note, in the “Pursuit of Diarmaid and Grainne,” p. 140.)

When mór and beḡ are used with the preposition do, they give the idea of enough or not enough for a person: níor beḡ do (marbhad bair n-airneac) mar eiric uairre, (the killing of your fathers) is not small to him—is enough for him—should suffice for him—as an eric (fine) from you: níor beḡ duir a ba do bpeic ó Fhionn, “it was not little for you—it was enough for you—to take away his cows from Finn.”

29. Woe to.

Ir maireḡ don b-peap rín, woe to that man: a maireḡ do’n d’pungḡ ḡoirpeap do’n olc maire, “woe to those who call evil good.” Expressions of this kind are sometimes elliptical; as, ir maireḡ naḡ n-déanann comairle deaḡ-mná, “woe [to him] who doeth not the counsel of a good wife” (lit. “it is woe who doeth not,” &c.).

30. So . . as: as . . as.

When these “correspondent conjunctions” are expressed in Irish, the second one is usually translated either by aḡur, “and,” or by le, “with:” aḡur a duḡairc ría an can do bioḡ a mac com appaḡta aḡur ḡo lionpaḡ a meup an ioḡ, “and he said to her when his son should be so grown (com appaḡta) as that his finger would fill the ring” (lit.

“so grown and that his finger,” &c.): do bí a pleag cóin peañar le mol muillinn, “his spear was as thick as the shaft of a mill” (lit. “as thick with.”)

Agur follows amlaib or amla (thus, so, in this manner), much in the same way as it follows cóin; and in this use it sometimes answers very nearly to “viz.,” ar amlaib do puar Naisi acap Déirdre, acap an Cennchaemh etarra, “it is thus he found Naisi and Déirdre, and the Cenn-chaemh (a kind of chess-board) between them.” (Meaning, “it was thus he found them, viz., with the Cenn-chaemh between them.”)

31. Every other day: every second day: every alternate day.

Phrases like these are often expressed in Irish by the indefinite pronoun gac, followed by the preposition le or pe gac le Óomnac ag dul cum teampoill, going to the church every other (or every alternate) Sunday: na tri ríogte rin do Thuataib De Danann do bí i b-pleaíor Eireann gac pe
m-bliagam, “these three kings of the Tuatha De Danann were in the sovereignty of Erin every other year” (i.e. each for a year).

32. The Head.

The word for head is used in Irish, as it is in most languages, in a great variety of idiomatic phrases. Some have been already noticed among the compound propositions; and these and others will be understood from the following examples.

A g-ceann bliadna, at the end of a year: do bí riab a g-ceann na faicce, they were at the end of the field. A duhairt Naisi le h-Ardan dul ar ceann ferzuir, “Naisi said to Ardan to go for Fergus” (“to go on the head of Fergus”): pillpe ar a g-ceann, “turn thou back for them” (“on their head”). Ó nac liom dul ón g-contabairt ro am ceann, “since I am not able to escape from this danger [that lies] before me” (am ceann, “in my head” = before me). Raápaib ad ceann, a Fhinn, agur a g-ceann na Féinne, “I will go to thee (or before thee), O Finn, and to the Feni” (“in thy head and in the head of the Feni”). Acap beirib buaib acap bennaetan dá cenn, “and bear ye victory and blessing on its account” (dá cenn, “from its head”).
Tar ceann gur faoil an toiceac nac raib baozal ar bit ar féin, “although the rich man thought that there was no danger at all to (i.e. of) himself” (tar ceann gur, “over the head that” = although). I r iongna duitre an gpaib rin do εαβαιρτδαμρα ταρ δεανν Φηνν, αρ Διαρμαιδ, "it is a wonder for thee to give that love to me instead of (to) Finn," says Diarmaid" (ταρ δεανν Φηνν, "over the head of Finn," in preference to Finn, instead of Finn)

33. A proper noun with the genitive of a noun of office.*

When a proper noun is followed by a noun in the genitive signifying a profession, office, trade, or calling, the resulting phrase has a curious idiomatic meaning.

Seaḡan an fēiḡeabōra, which is word for word, "John of the weaver," means in reality "John (the son, son-in-law, servant, or some other close connection) of the weaver;" Seaḡan na baimeabaiḡe, "John (the son, &c.) of the widow."

If, while the proper name is in the nominative, the second noun is also in the nominative, the meaning is quite different, the second noun being then simply in apposition to the first: thus Fepḡur maop (nom.) means "Fergus the steward;" but Fepḡur an maop (gen.) is "Fergus (the son, &c.) of the steward."

Suppose, now, you have to express in Irish such a phrase as "the house of Fergus the steward," in which the proper name must be in the genitive: as the two nouns are in apposition, the second, according to a rule of Syntax (Rule 6, p. 96) should also be in the genitive: τεαδ Φηεḡυρ αν μαοιρ. But here is an ambiguity; for, according to the present idiom, this expression would also mean "the house of Fergus (the son, &c.) of the steward." To avoid this ambiguity, a disagreement in case is allowed in such expressions, between the two nouns, when they are in apposition. Thus "the house of Fergus the steward" is τεαδ Φηεḡυρ μαορ (in which Φηεḡυρ is gen. and μαορ nom.); whereas τεαδ Φηεḡυρ αν μαοιρ is understood to mean "the house of Fergus (the son, &c.) of the steward." So in Dr. MacHale's translation of Homer, the first two lines are rendered:—

Opuc Acuil peinn, oig neaiva, a'r buan fεapḡ;

Acuil mic Peil, an ḡapḡiḡeac teinneac ḡapḡ.

"The wrath of Achilles sing, O heavenly virgin, and his enduring anger, of Achilles son of Peleus, the fiery fierce hero."

* The substance of this explanation and the illustrative examples have been taken from an interesting Essay on the present state of the Irish language in Munster, written and sent to the Royal Irish Academy by Mr. John Fleming of Rathgormuck.

Here the last noun ḡairḡideac, with its two adjectives, is in the nominative, while Ḃcuil, with which it is in apposition, is genitive.

In the first example, Rule 7, p. 96, bean Sheagáin an fíḡeadópa, accordingly, is not "the wife of John the weaver," but "the wife of John (son, &c.) of the weaver;" the wife of John the weaver, would be expressed by bean Sheagáin fíḡeadóip.

34. Possession.

There is no verb in Irish corresponding to the English verb "to have" as expressing possession; and the sentence "the man has a book," is expressed in Irish by the verb tá and the preposition aḡ, in this form, tá leabap aḡ an duine, "a book is at (or with) the man:" cia airḡead aḡum ("money is with me"), I have money: cia bé aḡ a b-puil airḡead ("whoever with whom is money"), whoever has money. Ní féidip le duine an ní naḡ m-beideac aḡe do tabairt uaid, aḡur ní b-puil do-mairḡeacḡ aḡumpa, "it is impossible for a man to give away what he does not himself possess, and I do not possess immortality" (word-for-word: "it is not possible for a man the thing which would not be with him to give from him, and not is immortality with myself"). Do aḡel Concubap bopaḡ acap do fíappaiḡ dé an paib fleḡ ollaḡ aḡe do, "Conchobhar addressed Borach and inquired of him whether he had a feast prepared for him" (lit.: "whether a feast was ready with him [i.e. Borach] for him [i.e. Conchobar.])

The use of pronouns in this idiom sometimes gives rise to further idiomatic complications. Cia aḡumne aḡ a b-puil an fípinne? "Which of us has the truth?" This is word forword: "Which of us with whom is the truth?" and the interrogative appears without any government or other syntactical connection. Some good authorities believe that the preposition aḡ in this construction governs not only the relative a, but also, by a sort of attraction, the interrogative cia. Tá bean eile a n-Coḡaill a b-puil aici corḡm air, "there is another woman in Youghal who has a crown on him" (i.e. to whom he owes a crown: Idiom 16). Here, also, there is an apparent redundancy, the act of "having" being expressed doubly, namely, both by the relative a before b-puil, and by aici; and the relative, according to the same authority, would be governed by the preposition aḡ of aici. The sentence may be expressed without redundancy in this manner:—Tá bean eile a n-Éoðáill aḡ a b-ḡuill coróin air. The last example exactly resembles the English "there is a man in Dublin whom I owe a pound to him:" and perhaps it would be better to consider it, like the English sentence, merely as bad grammar, which is to be avoided by using a different form of expression in the manner shown. The apparent redundancy of the first example, which is from a good authority, cannot, however, be got rid of in this way. So also in, cia léir an ceac rín (who owns that house), the le of léir would appear to govern the pronoun with which it is combined, and also the interrogative cia.

35. Ownership.

Ownership is expressed by the verb ir and the preposition le, with: ir leatpa an ceac, "the house belongs to thee" (lit. "it is with thee the house"): ir lem' atair na ba rín, those cows belong to my father ("it is with my father those cows"): cia léir na ba rín, who owns those cows? ("who with him [are] those cows?") Oir ir le neac éirín do Thuata De Danann na muca, "for the pigs belong to some person of the Tuatha De Danann." (A wizard holds a golden branch in his hand, and king Cormac asks him) an leat féin an épaob rín? "Does that branch belong to thyself?"

Observe the distinction between this idiom and the last in the following sentence:—Ta airgead go leor aḡad, ac̄t ní leat féin é, "thou hast plenty of money, but it does not belong to thyself."

36. Wanting a thing.

The idea of wanting a thing, including a wish to get it, is usually expressed by the verb ta and the preposition ó from: ta leabap uaim, I want a book: lit., "a book is from me:" ceud̄ atá uair? "What dost thou want?"

37. Genitive plurals of Personal Pronouns.

Each of the three prepositional pronouns, aḡaim, aḡaib̄, aca, has two different meanings, which are always easily distinguished by the context.

1. Possession, as in Idiom 34: Do bí leabap aca, they had books.

2. The sense of a genitive plural when following words denoting a part: ḡac̄ fear aḡuinn, "each man of us;" no eiriḡ an dapa fear acoran do déanañ an éleapa, "the second man of them (acoran, "of themselves") arose to perform the feat:" cia aḡuinne aḡ a b-puil an fírinne, ar Fionn, "'which of us has the truth,' says Finn" (aḡ a b-puil, "with whom is" = "has :": see Idiom 34).

38. To give a name.

To give a name to a thing is often expressed in Irish by to put a name on it: map ḡo ceugḡar dá banuaḡaḡaḡ ar bhéoil aḡur ar Ohanann, "as (the name) 'two ladies' was put on Bechoill and Danann: i.e. as they "were called 'two ladies.'" Map ḡo b-ceug cleap ar an ḡ-cleap rin, "as he called that feat 'a feat:'" (lit. "as that he put [the name] 'feat' on that feat").

Sometimes, also, to give such and such a name to a thing is expressed by "to say such and such a name with a thing:" Ros-dá-ráileac rin a ráiḡceap Liumneac aniu, "Ros-da-shaileach which is called Limerick now" (lit. "R. with which is said 'Limerick' now").

39. De after comparatives.

The prepositional pronoun de "of it," is often postfixed to comparatives, giving rise to some idiomatic phrases. Aḡur ḡion ḡo b-puil cuib aḡuinn do mapbaḡ Diairmaḡa, ní móibe do ḡeubaḡ (Aongur) an fírinne uaim, "and although we have no part in killing Diarmaid, Aongus would not the more receive the truth from us" (here móibe is de added to mó, the comparative of mór, great: for ḡion ḡo = "although not:" see Idiom 11). Ir pupaibe d'Fhionn ár loraḡa leanaim, an eaḡra beib aḡuinn, "it is the easier for Finn to follow our track that we have the horses" (pupaibe = de after pupa, comparative of pupur, easy): i.e. "our having the horses makes it easier for Finn," &c.

40. "A man of great strength."

"A man of great strength," is expressed by the Irish peap ir mór neart, which translated word for word is "a man (who) is great strength:" the words mór neart being in the nominative, and not in the genitive, as might be expected from the English "of great strength." This idiom is extremely common in Irish, the verb ir in some of its forms being always used; and when translating it, remember that the Irish words, though in the nominative case, convey the exact sense of the genitive with "of" in English, and must be rendered accordingly. Ní raib a g-cómhampir rir fear ba mór ór aghur airgead ina Diarmaid, "there was not at the same time with him a man who had more gold and silver than Diarmaid" (lit. "a man [who] was greater gold and silver," i.e. "a man who was of greater gold and silver.") Óo dearcap an beic ba maínda cruic, "I saw a lady (of) bright shape:" Talam ba fearr biað aghur deoc, "a land (of) the best food and drink:" Oirín ba éreun neart a' r luic, "Oisín of mighty strength and vigour."

Sometimes the preposition go (with) is used instead of the verb: as fear go mór neart, a man with great strength, i.e. a man of great strength.

41. A wish.

"I wish I had such and such a thing," is often expressed in Irish by some such form of phrase as "Alas that I have not got it!" the word gan being generally used as the negative particle. Ar tpuaið gan peata 'n maoin aghum! "I wish I had the shepherd's pet!" (Here ar tpuaið, "it is pity" = "alas:" aghum is used to denote possession, with its verb understood—Idiom 34: and the word-for-word translation is "it is pity not the pet of the shepherd with me.") A Dhia gan mé am' abailín, "I wish I were an apple" ("O God, I not an apple"—or "in my apple.")

42. One noun asserted of another by ta.

When one noun is asserted of another (or of a pronoun) by the verb ta, in any of its forms, it requires the aid of the preposition a or ann, "in," and of one of the possessive pronouns, giving rise to a unique and extremely curious idiom. Thus "I am a man," if expressed in Irish by ta, will be (not ta mé fear, but) ta mé am' fear, which is word for word, "I am in my man." bí túra ad' rígan aghur mipe am' feoil, "be thou the knife and I the flesh." (lit. "be thou in thy knife and I in my flesh"). Bechoill and Danann do bí i n-a m-baincigeapnaib, "Bechoill and Danann who were princesses" ("who were in their princesses"): ir fearr éirean míle uair ná túra, cuir a g-cár go b-fuil tú ad' ríge no ad' príonnra. "he is better a thousand times than thou, even supposing that thou art a king or a prince" (cuir a g-cár, "put in case" = "suppose" or "although"): paðaid na daoine búr cuid aca 'n-a n-6ḡánaiḃ, aḡur cuib̄ aca 'n-a ḡeanóiriḡiḃ, "men die ('receive death:' Idiom 3), "some of them (cuib̄ aca: Idiom 37) as youths, and some as old men" ("some of them in their youths and some of them in their old men.") U Dhiá, ḡan mé am̄ abáillín! "would God that I were an apple!" ("O God without me in my apple!").

Even when one thing is not directly asserted of another, this use of the preposition and the possessive is extremely common in Irish. Táimpe am' ódla, "I am asleep" ("I am in my sleep"): d'éiriḡ ina ḡearam̄, "he stood up" ("he arose in his standing"): mipe am' aonar, "myself alone" ("myself in my one person"): clanna Lir ina ḡ-ceatḡar, (the four children of Lir) ("the children of Lir in their four-persons").

The preposition ann is used with ta without any governed noun, to denote existence in general; as atá aon Dhiá anám ann, there is only one God; here the ann in the end, which has no representative in the translation, means "in it," i. e. in existence. Sometimes this ann answers very nearly to the English "here," or "there;" as ip tú atá ann "it is thou who art in it—who art in existence—who art there."

43. Differences between ip and ta.

There are several differences, as to the manner of application, between ip and ta.

1. Ip is a simple copula, and is used to predicate one thing of another, or to connect an attribute with its subject; as ip mé an t-ḡriḡe, an ḡírinne, aḡur an beata, "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

But if existence in connection with place is to be predicated of the subject, ta is used; as ta mé a m-baile atá cliat, I am in Dublin: an patḃ tú ann rin? wert thou there?

If an adjective is to be predicated of a noun, either ip or ta may be used:—ip bḡeaḡ an lá é, or ta an lá bḡeaḡ, "it is a fine day," or "the day is fine."

2. Ip connects one noun or pronoun with another, as predicate and subject directly, and without the aid of any other word; as ip ḡear mé, I am a man. But ta cannot do this without the aid of the preposition i or inn and the possessive pronoun, as already explained in last Idiom; as ta mé am' ḡear, I am a man ("I am in my man.")

3. Ir expresses simply that a person or thing is so, and implies nothing more. But when the assertion is made by τá, there is often something more implied than is contained in the direct assertion—the idea that the person or thing has not always been so—has come to be so, &c. Thus, if you say to me ir fear é, your assertion means nothing more than that “he is a man”—not a woman or a coward, &c. If we see a figure approach in the dark, and that after looking close you find it is a man, your correct phraseology is, ir fear é, by which I understand you to mean “it is a man”—not a woman, or a beast, or a ghost.

But if you say to me τá ré 'n-a fear (“he is in his man”), here I take you to mean a very different thing—that he is now a man, no longer a boy, grown up to be a man. If I were speaking of a person as if he were a mere boy, and that you wished to correct this false impression, the proper phraseology would be, τá ré 'n-a fear.

But though this idea of an implied change is often contained in an assertion made by τá, it is not always so; as ní b-puill aóit aon Dia amáin ann, aca 'n-a fíor-ppioraid, there is only one God alone, who is a pure spirit: here the last assertion is made by τá though there can be no change.

4. τá is used with aó to denote possession (Idiom 43); ir is used with le to denote ownership (Idiom 44); in these two applications the two verbs cannot change places.

τá may indeed be used with le, but the idea conveyed is not “belonging to,” but “being favourable to:” Do bí Eolur leo (“Eolus was with them”), does not mean that they were the owners of Eolus (which would be the meaning if ir had been used), but that “Eolus was favourable to them”—“was on their side.”

5. τá is used with the Irish words for cold, heat, hunger, &c., as in Idiom 36; as τá ré ocpar oim, hunger is in me, I am hungry: here ir cannot be used.

6. When the comparative of an adjective is used as in the following sentences, either verb will answer:—ir fearbhe é ná mipe or τá ré nior fearbhe ná mipe, he is richer than I.

But when the superlative is employed, ir, not τá, must be used:—ir é ir fear ir fearbhe ran dúitche é, he is the richest man in the country.
